

Acknowledgements

Before we delve into the study of copular clauses, I would like to take the time to thank the people who have given me the intellectual, moral and emotional support to write this book.

First and foremost, I would like to thank my former supervisors, Kristin Davidse and Lieven Vandelanotte. They have been wonderful mentors, who put a great deal of energy, effort and commitment into the project that has led to this book. The final product would not be what it is without their feedback and contributions. I am very grateful for everything they have taught me and for their generous and continuing support.

Many thanks further go out to Elwys de Stefani, Francisco González-García, Karen Lahousse, Laurence Meurant and Jeroen Darquennes, who, as part of my doctoral committee, commented on earlier versions of this book. I would also like to thank Bill McGregor and Eirian Davies, who have been very kind and helpful in giving feedback on my research.

During my research stays in Cardiff and Manchester, Gerard O'Grady and Tine Breban have also been very generous with their time and help. Their willingness to exchange ideas with me has greatly benefited this project. I am particularly grateful to Gerard for introducing me to theories of information structure and prosody.

At the Universities of Namur and Leuven, I had the pleasure of working with great colleagues, many of whom have become more friends than colleagues. Noémie, Caroline, Ngum, Ditte, Myriam, Simon, Ruth, Nathalie, Maria, Vera, Sophie, Florence, Maud, Margaux, Christian, Laurence, Dirk, Elisabeth, Jeroen, Valérie, Norbert, Leonie, Sophie, Alysso, Nadine, An, and Lut. Thank you for all the uplifting advice, distractions and encouragement.

I also owe an enormous amount of gratitude to my friends and family. To my parents, to my sisters Elke and Joke, and to my friends Jolien, Maria Clara, Carolle, Astrid, Michelle, Tobias, Joke, Eveline, Stella, Bram, Lieven, Ellie, Michael, Sven. Thank you for your love and friendship and for reminding me time and again that there are other things in life than copular clauses. Very warm thanks go to Ward, in particular, for being a great best friend. And, of course, I would especially like to thank Gaetano for being as supportive as you have been and for putting up with all the late nights of work and the kitchen-table monologues about linguistic puzzles.

Finally, I would like to thank the editorial team at De Gruyter Mouton and particularly the anonymous reviewer whose comments and feedback pointed my attention to unresolved issues. Their help has improved the book a great deal.
