

Contents

Nuria de Castilla, François Déroche, Michael Friedrich
Towards a Comparative Study of Libraries in the Manuscript Age — 1

The Islamic World

John Seyller
The Operations of the Imperial Mughal Library — 17

Nuria de Castilla
Princes's Readings: The Poetry in Mūlāy Zaydān's Collection at El Escorial — 39

François Déroche, Lbachir Tahali
Collecting Books in Eighteenth-Century Morocco: the Bannānī Library in Fez — 63

East and South Asia

Jean-Pierre Drège
Two Libraries of the Tang Capital — 107

Ivo Smits
Institutional Libraries in Japan's Classic Court Age (Heian Period, 794–1185) — 123

Gérard Colas
Palm-leaf Manuscript Libraries in Southern India Around the Thirteenth Century: The Sarasvatī Library in Chidambaram — 135

Byzantium

Luciano Bossina
How Many Books Does It Take to Make an Emperor's Library? Constantine VII
Porphyrogenitus and a Chapter of History of the Manuscript Book — 161

Inmaculada Pérez Martín

Byzantine Libraries: The Public and the Private — 183

Western Europe

Donatella Nebbiai

How Private Libraries Contributed to the Transmission of Texts — 211

Jacques Verger

Libraries and Teaching:

Comments on Western Universities in the Middle Ages — 225

Vanina Kopp

An Ideal Library for an Ideal King? Showcasing the Collection, Organisation and Function of the Royal Louvre Library in Late Medieval Paris — 243

Index of Manuscripts — 265