

Contents

Acknowledgments .....	v
Introduction .....	1
1. Otto's scholarship .....	2
2. Otto among the theologians .....	3
3. Otto and the humanistic science of religion .....	15
4. Otto's humanistic critics .....	26
5. The present collection .....	38
References .....	43
A. Autobiographical fragments .....	50
1. My life (1891, 1898) .....	50
2. Letters from North Africa (1911) (Selections) .....	61
3. Letters from India and Egypt (1927-1928 [1938]) .....	92
4. A letter from Greece (1891 [1941]) .....	100
B. Politics and society .....	102
5. Early Political Involvement (1903 [1938]) .....	102
6. Germany as a cultural colonial power (1912) .....	104
7. Rudolf Otto, National Liberal candidate (1913) .....	115
8. Election reform (1918) .....	128
9. A League of Nations is not enough (1920, 1921, 1923) ..	142
10. A service to celebrate the fatherland (1925) .....	150
C. The academy and the study of religions .....	162
11. The idea of the modern university (1927) .....	162
12. Zinzendorf discovered the sensus numinis (1932) .....	179
13. Buddhism, Islām, and the irrational (1932) .....	186
14. Gandhi, saint and statesman (1933) .....	194
D. The work of the church .....	206
15. Establish church offices for women (1903) .....	206
16. Liberal Protestants need practice in ministry, too (1910, 1911) .....	214

17. The creed set to music (1911, 1913) .....	219
18. The church's mission in a secular society (1919) .....	228
E. Ethical reflections .....	253
19. On feeling guilty (1931) .....	253
20. The autonomy of values and theonomy (posthumous) ....	274
A bibliography of Otto in English .....	289
References .....	291
Index .....	299