

Table of Contents

Part I: Introduction

Harry van der Hulst and Norval Smith

The framework of Nonlinear Generative Phonology	3
---	---

Part II: Stress and accent

Bruce Hayes and Stanisław Puppel

On the Rhythm Rule in Polish	59
------------------------------------	----

Jack Hoeksema

Formal Properties of Stress Representation	83
--	----

Jan G. Kooy and Mies van der Niet

Stress, Stress Shift, and Morphology: the Case of Dutch -baar	101
--	-----

Carlos Gussenhoven

Intonation: a whole Autosegmental Language	117
--	-----

Ron van Zonneveld

Word Rhythm and the Janus Syllable	133
--	-----

Part III: Prosodic Categories

Geert E. Booij

Coordination Reduction in Complex Words: a Case for Prosodic Phonology	143
--	-----

Grzegorz Dogil

Nonlinear Phonology in the Area of Speech and Grammar Pathology	161
---	-----

Anneke Neijt

Clitics in Arboreal Phonology	179
-------------------------------------	-----

Marina Nespor

The Phonological Word in Italian	193
--	-----

VI Contents

Domingos Prieto Prosodic Representation and Transformations in Galician-Portuguese	205
Irene Vogel On Constraining Prosodic Rules	217
Part IV: Autosegmental Phonology
Ben Hermans The Relation between Aspiration and Preaspiration in Icelandic	237
Harry van der Hulst Vowel Harmony in Hungarian: a Comparison of Segmental and Auto-segmental Analyses	267
John J. McCarthy Speech Disguise and Phonological Representation in Amharic	305
Christine ter Mors Empty V-Nodes and their Role in the Klamath Vowel Alternations	313
Roland Noske Syllabification and Syllable Changing Processes in Yawelmani	335
Norval Smith Spreading, Reduplication and the Default Option in Miwok Nonconcatenative Morphology	363