

TABLE OF CONTENTS

I. Meter and Rhythm	9
1. Interpretations of Stress as the Basis of Meter	9
1.1. Accentual Systems	9
1.2. Descriptions in Terms of Metrical Feet	11
1.3. Descriptions Based on the Foot with Obligatory and Optional Stresses Distinguished	12
2. The Role of Optional Stresses	13
2.1. Optional Stresses Opposed to Obligatory Stresses and Unstressed Syllables	13
2.2. Optional Stresses as Part of Rhythm	14
3. Difference between Meter and Rhythm in Bylina and Learned Verse	14
II. Description of the Meter	16
1. Introduction	16
1.1. Repetition of Lines	16
1.2. Variations at the Beginning and End of the Line	16
1.3. Obligatory and Optional Stresses	17
2. Classification of Lines by "Meters"	18
2.1. Group 3	19
2.2. Group 1	20
2.3. Group 2	21
2.4. Group 4	22
3. Basic Metrical Tendencies	22
3.1. Distribution of Stresses	22
3.2. Infeasibility of Descriptions in Terms of Feet	23
III. Rhythmic Units Composing the Lines	25
1. Introduction	25
2. Types of Lines Based on Combinations of Colons	25
2.1. Group 3	25

2.2. Group 1	28
2.3. Groups 2 and 4	28
3. Positions of Breaks with Regard to Obligatory Stresses .	28
4. Factors Affecting Location of Breaks	32
4.1. Three-Syllable Intervals	32
4.2. Two-Syllable Intervals	32
4.3. One-Syllable Intervals	34
4.4. Four-Syllable Intervals	34
4.5. Five-Syllable Intervals	34
4.6. Basic Tendencies in Locating Breaks	34
5. Frequency of Colon Types	35
5.1. Terminal Positions	35
5.2. Medial Positions	37
5.3. Basic Tendencies in Colon Types	38
 IV. Metrical and Rhythmical Characteristics of the Individual Bylina	 39
1. Introduction	39
2. Metrically and Rhythmically Related Bylina	39
2.1. Average Occurrence of Metrical and Rhythmic Features	39
2.2. Deviation from the Average Curve	40
2.3. Group A. Lines with Low Frequency of 12-Syllable Lines	40
2.4. Group B. Lines with High Frequency of 12-Syllable Lines	44
 V. Repetition of Prepositions	 55
1. Introduction	55
2. Extent of Repetition	55
2.1. Repetition in Old Russian	55
2.2. Repetition in the Dialects	56
2.3. Repetition in Bylina	56
3. Syntactic Basis for Repetition	58
4. Repetition as a Metrical Device	61
4.1. Repetition of Variants of "V", "K", and "S"	61
4.2. Prepositions without Consonantal Forms	62
 VI. Morphological Variants and Metrical Alternants	 64
1. Introduction	64

2. Alternation of Long and Short Endings of Adjectives and Pronouns	64
2.1. Adjectives within the Line	65
2.2. Pronouns	66
2.3. Adjectives at the End of the Line.	67
3. Infinitives	68
4. Loss of "j" and Vowel Contraction	71
5. Reflexive Suffix	72
6. Pleophony	74
7. Suffixation	75
8. Word Order	76
9. Alternation of Prepositions, Particles, and Pronouns	76
 VII. Accentuation Changes and the Formation of the Epic Formulas	77
1. Introduction	77
2. Adjective-Noun Combinations	77
2.1. Root-Stressed Adjective and Mobile-Stressed Noun	78
2.2. Mobile-Stressed Adjective and Mobile-Stressed Noun	79
2.3. End-Stressed Adjective and Mobile-Stressed Noun	79
2.4. Mobile-Stressed Adjective and End-Stressed Noun	81
2.5. End-Stressed Adjective and End-Stressed Noun	81
2.6. Enclitic Nouns.	83
3. Adjectives with Varying Stressed Syllables	83
3.1. Analogy in the Adjective Paradigm	83
3.2. Definite and Indefinite Adjectives Stressed on the Same Syllable	85
4. Analogy in Formula Formation	85
5. Epic Formulas from Different Language Periods	86
 VIII. Development of the Line in Russian.	87
1. Introduction	87
2. Structure of the Epic Line in Russian and Serbo-Croatian	88
2.1. Long Vowels in the Serbo-Croatian Line	88
2.2. Stresses in the Serbo-Croatian Line	88
2.3. Similarity of Lines in Russian and Serbo-Croatian	89
2.4. Comparison of Serbo-Croatian and Russian with Proto-Slavic	90
3. The Epic Formulas	91
3.1. Original Position of Accent	91

3.2. Retraction of Stress	92
3.3. Epic Formulas without Stress Retraction	92
3.4. Rhythmic Similarity of Epic Formulas and Adjectives with Uncontracted Endings	93
4. Effect of Formation of Formulas on Line Structure . . .	93
4.1. Tendency toward Sequences of Three Unaccented Syllables	93
4.2. Relocation of the Break	95
4.3. Loss of the Break	95
4.4. Expansion of the Line	96
Appendix	99
A Selected Bibliography.	103
Index.	104