

Table of Contents

Martin Borýsek, Davide Liberatoscioli

Introduction — 1

Part 1 The inner diversity of Italian Jewry

Alessandra Veronese

Italian Jews encountering Ashkenazi Jews in northern Italy during the late Middle Ages (late fourteenth and fifteenth century) — 27

Asher Salah

On the meaning of “Italian” in early modern Hebrew sources — 43

Ori Kinberg

Tradition or individual talents? The poems of Joseph Zark and Hebrew literary culture in Renaissance Italy — 63

Joseph A. Skloot

Silkworms and bookworms: the partners of Bologna and their boundary-crossing Jewish library — 85

Part 2 Non-Jewish perceptions of Jewish pluralism

Pierre Savy

Responses to Jewish diversity of origins among Italian princes (1450–1550) — 109

Alice Grazzini

Italian Jewry in the “Theater of languages”. Sephardic and Italian Jews in a Roman giudiata — 125

Giacomo Todeschini

The Jews and the circulation of blood as economic metaphor in medieval/early modern civic discourse (Italy, fifteenth–seventeenth centuries) — 145

Mauro Perani

The 1625 trial against the “heretical” epitaphs in Jewish Cemetery of Ancona — 159

David Abulafia

What happened to the Jews of southern Italy? — 181

Part 3 Negotiating identities

Serena Di Nepi

Others within others. On scole and diversity in the ghetto of Rome (sixteenth to nineteenth centuries) — 203

Germano Maifreda

Why do Jews resort to Christians? Two cases of intra-Jewish “ethnic” conflict in eighteenth-century Italy — 221

Rachele Scuro

Building the ghetto: the many facets of Venetian Jewry in the sixteenth century — 239

Paola Ferruta

Social differentiation and stereotypes on Jewishness in Habsburg Trieste (1760–1848) — 261

Francesca Bregoli

Conversion, patria potestas, and capital devolution in eighteenth-century Livorno and Mantua — 289

Editors — 309

Contributors — 311

Personal Name Index — 313

Places Name Index — 319