

Acknowledgments

The present edited volume is the result of the international research network “New Directions in Film Historiography: Digital Tools and Methods in Film and Media Studies” (2019–2023), funded by the DFG – Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft (German Research Foundation), project number 423266924, and its closing conference “Doing Digital Film History,” held at Philipps-Universität Marburg in November 2022. For funding the network’s research, and in particular the several international meetings leading up to the closing conference and the present volume, we wish to first express our deep gratitude to DFG. We would also like to thank the anonymous reviewer of the grant proposal who recognized the value of the network for reflecting and developing computational methods and analysis in the context of film and media historiography.

In addition to the authors whose work is represented in this volume, all of whom contributed immensely to the network’s inspiring activities and discussions, we would like to extend our deep gratitude to network members, Feng-Mei Heberer, Lies Van de Vijver, Niels-Oliver Walkowski; collaborators, Federica Bardelli, Camille-Blot-Wellens, Nadieh Bremer, Johanna Drucker, Andreas Fickers, Dirk Förstner, Jörg Frieß, Oliver Hanley, Julia Lück, Michelle Mantsio, Peter Niedermüller, Andy O’Dwyer, Petra Rauschenbach, Thelma Ross, Martina Schories, Deb Verhoeven, Ingo Zechner; guest presenters, Maggie Hennefeld, Laura Horak, Mila Oiva, Frauke Pirk, Elif Rongen-Kaynakçı; panel chairs, Clara Auclair, Isadora Campregher Paiva, Bregt Lameris, Kai Matuszkiewicz, Nanne van Noord; student assistants, Anne Hart, Judith Kempnich; and the organizing team of the conference, Marlene Leonie Biebricher, Pauline Junginger, Yolanda Well Rull, who all offered invaluable food for thought and support along the way. Our thanks goes also to the attendees at the final conference for their generosity and encouragement of our endeavors during the discussions. The richness of these discussions inspired us to develop and broaden the scope of this volume in productive ways.

We sincerely thank Andreas Fickers, director of the Luxembourg Centre for Contemporary and Digital History (C<sup>2</sup>DH) at the University of Luxembourg, for accepting the book into the Studies in Digital History and Hermeneutics series and for his support. We thank our publisher, De Gruyter Oldenbourg, in particular Rabea Rittgerdt, Verena Deutsch, and Annika Padoan, for their guidance on the production of this volume, as well as our reviewers for helping us improve it. A special acknowledgement goes to Elizabeth Rankin, for rigorously and patiently reviewing the entire manuscript in the editing process with an impeccable attention to detail.

Finally, we would like to express our gratitude to the contributors to this volume, all of whom generously shared their insights and creatively responded to the potential and challenges of doing digital film history.
