

Authors

Sebastian FAHNER is a PhD researcher with the Research Training Group “Empires” at the University of Freiburg. His PhD project focuses on the various uses of history in the socialist labour movement in the Habsburg monarchy and Spain from 1890 to 1914. His interests include the history of the labour movement, the history of nationalism, and the history of political ideas. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0002-4944-4089>

Christian FEICHTINGER is a doctoral candidate in the Research Training Group 2571 Empires. His dissertation, Imperiale Anachronien und Anachronismen. Der Chronotopos Rom und die translatio imperii in den Texten Machiavellis, is an interdisciplinary and comparative study exploring the concept of translation imperii in Machiavelli's writings. In addition to his doctoral research, Feichtinger is an assistant responsible for the technical implementation of a database dedicated to Machiavelli's letters at machiavellianotium.org. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0009-0008-6261-0767>

Elena FELLNER is a PhD student in Middle Eastern Studies at Freiburg University, Germany, and a research associate at the Collaborative Research Center “Heroes – Heroizations – Heroisms.” They studied Middle Eastern Studies, Iranian Studies, and Political Science in Freiburg, Cairo, and Esfahan. Their research interests include online protest culture, modern Iranian history, and Iranian foreign policy. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0009-0002-2706-1447>

Rhiannon GARTH JONES is a PhD Fellow at the Center for Urban Network Evolutions at Aarhus University, working on the early Abbasid visual language of power in imperial urban centres. Her other research interests include late antiquity, religions of the Mediterranean, decolonising archival practice, and the intersection of empire, history, and religion, as well as their reception and manifestations in the modern day. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-6307-0178>

Peter S. MAKHLOUF is a Lecturer in the Department of Comparative Literature at Princeton University. His research focuses on the many afterlives of antiquity, both classical and nonclassical, particularly in the modern German tradition. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0003-4832-8171>

Alexandr OSIPIAN is a Research Fellow at the Leibniz Institute for the History and Culture of Eastern Europe, Leipzig. In 2018–2019 he was a Visiting Professor of Ukrainian history at the Justus-Liebig-Universität Gießen. He also served as a Research Fellow at the IERES, George Washington University (Washington, DC) (2012) and Osteuropa-Institut, Free University of Berlin (2020–2022). ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0003-4243-2939>

Oliver PEJIC is a historian interested in the cultural, social, and political history of East Central Europe in the long nineteenth century and interwar periods. His current dissertation project at the European University Institute (Florence, Italy) examines popular experiences of the transition from imperial to national rule in interwar Yugoslavia. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-8430-7584>

Rolf STROOTMAN is Associate Professor at Utrecht University, where he teaches World History, Ancient History, and Ottoman History. He is a specialist on court culture and imperialism in the Middle East, focusing on the empires of Alexander and his Successors. Much of his research has focused on the question of how these empires created connectivity. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0002-1642-0048>

Christine TAUBER is member of the research department and chief editor of “Kunstchronik” at the Central Research Institute for the History of Art (Zentralinstitut für Kunstgeschichte) as well as Professor at the Institute of Art History at the Ludwig-Maximilians-University Munich. Her fields of research are: (Art) historiography of the nineteenth century, Italian and French Renaissance, Mannerism, art politics and cultural history of the Age of Revolutions, art patronage, and art theory. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-8565-6997>

Rogier E. M. VAN DER HEIJDEN has obtained his PhD in Ancient History from the University of Freiburg, Germany. His dissertation project, written within the Research Training Group 2571 “Empires”, looked into civic histories in imperial contexts and the mechanisms of changing local discourses and temporal horizons under the influence of imperial structures in the Roman empire. In the past, Van der Heijden has published on the urban experience of the Colosseum Valley in Rome, for which he received the BABESCH Byvanck Award in 2021. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-8783-1760>

Jialin Christina WU is a Lecturer in Contemporary Asian History at the Université Paris I Panthéon-Sorbonne. She is a historian of empires, colonialism, and post-colonialism, with a regional focus on Southeast Asia. Her first book, Scouts in British Malaya: A Cultural History of Globalisation, is forthcoming with the Presses de Sciences Po (2024). ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0002-5165-3234>

Julian ZIMMERMANN studied history, philosophy, and archaeology in Freiburg i. Brsg. and in Rome. He worked as a research assistant and/or scholar at the University of Basel, the PH Freiburg, the University of Regensburg, and the German Historical Institute in Rome. His main research interests are the pre-modern history of the city of Rome, urban history, cultures of memory in the Mediterranean region, and public history. ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-9651-760X>