

Acknowledgments

For a book like this, acknowledgments must be paid to the contributors who have not only enriched us with their presence at our conference, “Narrating, Framing, Reflecting ‘Disability’: 21st Century ‘American’ Perspectives” but also prompted us to collect and put together this book due to the discussions about disability, medical humanities, narrative medicine, transnational American studies during the two days at Bielefeld University in June 2023. We are deeply grateful and learned much from Julia Andres, Mita Banerjee, Lakshmi Chithra Dilipkumar, Atalie Gerhard, Melanie Kreidler, Manal Masri, Mariya Nikolova, Julia Roth, Diana Tada Rueda, Kirsten Twelbeck, Diana Wagner, and Tabea Weber. The impetus for writing this book was also only possible due to the funding of our research project, “Mental Illness as Cultural Narrative: Contemporary Literature from the Contact Zones between the U.S., Canada, and the Caribbean” by the German Research Foundation (DFG). We are grateful to the CIAS for hosting our conference. We sought and received valuable, careful, and eagle eye observational help from Alexa Kenter during various stages of preparing and editing this publication – we are deeply indebted to you Alexa. Lastly, we would like to thank the De Gruyter team Julie Miess and Jens Lindenhain for a very efficient and smooth publication process.
