

Contents

Acknowledgments — V

Introduction: Hands and Technology — 1

Chapter One

Forming Hands: Surgery as Method in Paul Valéry — 22

A Scene of Writing — 22

Poetics as Surgery — 23

Poetry: The Hand Giving Form — 34

The Inform: The Shapelessness of the Hand — 42

Letters and Lines: The Importance of Drawing — 46

The Irreducibility of the Hand — 61

Chapter Two

Picturing Hands: Optical Tactility and New Vision — 63

Taking a Picture: How the Camera Challenges the Work of Hands — 63

Photo-Portraits: The Hand Replacing the Face — 67

Man Ray: Photography as a Form of Art — 77

László Moholy-Nagy: The Tactility of Vision — 85

Tangible Environments: Moholy-Nagy and Benjamin — 104

Chapter Three

Conserving Hands: Malte's Notebooks as Recording Devices — 109

The Hand Writing, the Hand Recording: Malte's Notebooks and the Haptic Gaze — 109

Handwriting and Modern Technologies — 115

A Poetics of Sculpting: Rodin's Hands and Narratology — 125

A Haptic Gaze: The Plasticity of Malte's Language — 136

Gestures: The Hand as Symptom of a Nervous State of Being — 141

Chapter Four

Moving Hands: Silent Film and Technologies of the Body — 149

Hands and Cinema — 149

Hands as Proto-Technology in Early Cinema: Body and Machine — 152

Occultism and Science: Robert Wiene's The Hands of Orlac — 155

Hands and Modern Technology — 167

Fritz Lang's Metropolis: The Reign of Machines — 178

Cinematic Community and Manual Principle — 189

Conclusion: From Manipulation to Digitization — 194

Image Credits — 201

Bibliography — 203

Index — 217