

Acknowledgments

The editors would like to acknowledge the many individuals who, through their various contributions, patience, and dedication, helped bring this special project to completion.

First and foremost, we offer our heartfelt thanks to Larry's family, especially his wife, Vicky, and son, Alexander, for their gracious support of Larry's career and research, allowing so many of us around the world to benefit from his teaching, guidance, kindness, and brilliance.

We are most grateful to Beatrice Kitzinger, not only for her contribution to this volume, but also for her enthusiasm, encouragement, and unwavering support throughout this process. Her insights and guidance led us to find the perfect home for our project with De Gruyter's Sense, Matter, and Medium series.

Our profound gratitude goes to Kathryn Starkey and Fiona Griffiths, our editors at De Gruyter. Thank you for meeting with us virtually during the difficult years of the pandemic, accommodating our expansive time zones, listening to our concerns, and guiding us through the most challenging parts of putting this collection together. We are also deeply grateful to Elisabeth Kempf and Dominika Herbst, who deftly handled the critical final stages of production to make this special publication a reality.

We recognize the anonymous reviewers of the volume and thank them for their valuable feedback. We also offer our appreciation for the diligence and care of our copy editor, Pamela Lankas, and to the Walters Art Museum for supporting the application of curatorial research funds toward this aspect of the publication.

Our thanks go to Sandy Isenstadt, Chair of the Art History department at the University of Delaware, for including us when putting together a virtual gathering in celebration of Larry's retirement, and thus allowing us to announce to Larry, officially and in front of a large virtual assembly of former students, friends, and colleagues, the publication of this celebratory volume.

We profoundly appreciate Larry's students, who, with great enthusiasm, shared their joyful recollections, reflections, and oftentimes deeply personal and emotional stories of their extraordinary time learning under Larry's watchful guidance.

Finally, we express our gratitude to Larry's former students, colleagues, and friends, who shared the work assembled in this collection. We thank them for their efforts and patience, bearing with this lengthy process, and working tirelessly under the most unusual and challenging circumstances of a global pandemic, to bring this project to fruition. We especially thank them for their dedication to this act of benevolent subterfuge as they conspired with us to keep this project a secret from Larry for a very long four years.
