

Contents

Foreword — V

Acknowledgements — VII

List of figures — XIII

List of tables — XV

Acronyms and abbreviations — XVII

Introduction — 1

Chapter 1

Neurodivergence and abstract language — 16

- 1 Speaking of abstract – neurodivergence and/or neurodiversity? — 16
- 2 Neurodivergent, autistic Wittgenstein — 22
- 3 Naming abstract language and naming assumptions — 30

Chapter 2

Language games, abstract nouns, and metadiscourse — 36

- 1 Abstract nouns at the core of our thought — 36
- 2 Shell nouns as language games — 41
- 3 How polysemy extends meaning — 49
- 4 How we meta our discourse — 53

Chapter 3

Power and privilege — 61

- 1 A case for corpus-assisted narrative research — 61
- 2 Corpus-led exploration of semantic prosody — 66
- 3 Lexical and conceptual ambiguity in power and privilege — 69
- 4 Culturomics and trends in representative n-grams — 76

Chapter 4

Race and gender — 82

- 1 The inevitable ambiguity of race and gender — 82
- 2 Race and gender in the corpus — 90
- 3 Race and gender in blogs — 96

Chapter 5

Identity indefinable — 101

- 1 Identity is officially “a thing” — 101
- 2 Collocating identity in the corpus — 107
- 3 Identity’s continued impact — 111
- 4 Identity-first language – What is it about? — 115

Chapter 6

Autistic narratives and appraisals of abstraction — 119

- 1 Narrative is “a thing” in linguistics — 119
- 2 Sam’s narrative — 123
- 3 K.esseff’s narrative — 128
- 4 Henry G’s narrative — 134

Chapter 7

Non-neurotypical narratives and appraisals — 143

- 1 Contributions from a non-control group — 143
- 2 Illogan’s narrative — 145
- 3 Jen’s narrative — 156
- 4 Nils’s narrative — 165

Chapter 8

Discernably thematic and transparently limited — 175

- 1 Persuasive takeaways from participants — 175
- 2 Lingua franca and self-determination — 180
- 3 Centering subjectivity and peripherality of neurodivergence — 186
- 4 Reflecting on how (not) to do narrative interviews — 191

Chapter 9

Abstracting the writer and the corpus — 198

- 1 Writing as experience — 198
- 2 Eliciting voice and writing agency — 204
- 3 Curating a new corpus in search of voice — 209
- 4 On rhetoric, voice, and a language game quandary — 216

Chapter 10

Moving forward in community — 224

- 1 De-pathologizing divergence: A call for all linguists and language scholars — 224
- 2 Neurodivergent language games in social interaction — 231

- 3 Beyond American English discourse: Learning from cognitive sociolinguistics — 236
- 4 Neurodivergence in translation studies: A community-based participatory model — 242
- 5 In the spirit of Jon Henner — 246

Appendix 1: Sam's writing response — 253

Appendix 2: K.esseff's writing response — 254

Appendix 3: Henry G's writing response — 255

Appendix 4: Illogan's writing response — 256

Appendix 5: Jen's writing response — 259

Appendix 6: Nils's writing response — 263

References — 265

Index of terms — 289

Index of people — 291

