

Acknowledgments

I would like to express my deepest thanks to the friends and colleagues who have helped me during the preparation of this book. Special thanks are owed to Alison Sharrock, the discussions with whom have aided me immensely in shaping my ideas on the generic interaction between epic and pastoral in the Metamorphoses. My thanks are also due to Sophia Papaioannou, Andreas Michalopoulos, Roy Gibson, Katharine Mawford, Julene Abad-Del Vecchio, and Katharine Molesworth for reading several versions of the present book and offering insightful comments, which have developed my research enormously. I am also profoundly grateful to the external examiner of my doctoral thesis, from which this book originates, Philip Hardie, whose thought-provoking remarks offered me stimuli for further thought and helped me to complete this book. I would also like to thank warmly the Trends in Classics team at De Gruyter, and particularly to those who supported me at each stage of this volume's publication. My final heartfelt thanks go to my son, Michalis, and my husband, Nikos, for their patience and support while writing the present book.

