Friends, colleagues, and professors have helped shape this study since its inception. In ways that I will never fully comprehend, it grew thanks to their comments: Víctor J. Krebs, Richard Bernstein, Elaine Wilson, Emily FitzGerald, Nico Sarian, Ishai Mishory. For waking me from a long slumber, Lorena Rojas; for their constant help, Kathleen Naab and Cerith Gardiner; for the generosity of her thoughts, Clemence Boulouque; for his conversation and guidance, Mark Taylor.

This book, at least in its initial form, is only a few months older than my daughter, Laia. She and her mother, Vanessa, taught me everything I think I know about birth and rebirth. The intuitions here explored are but an echo of their presence in my life.
