

Contents

Introduction — 1

A Jewish Manuscripts

- 1 Some Thoughts on Hebrew Manuscripts and their Significance — 11
- 2 Has More than a Century of Genizah Research Adjusted Jewish Notions of Scholarship, History and Identity? — 23
- 3 Late Prayer Books of the Ashkenazi, French, Sefardi and Italian Rites: A Tentative and Comparative Analysis — 45
- 4 Some First Editions of Genizah Manuscripts of Ben Sira: Approaches and Reproaches — 69
- 5 A New Edition and Translation of Cambridge Genizah Manuscript T-S Misc. 24.137.10a — 95

B Prayer Developments

- 6 The Hebrew Language as a Source of Ritual and Practice — 111
- 7 How did Jewish Prayer in the Medieval Islamic World Differ from its Equivalent in Christian Countries — 127
- 8 Liturgy as an Educational Process in Talmudic and Medieval Judaism — 145
- 9 Medieval Jewish Liturgy as Religious Education — 161

C Liturgical Notions

- 10 Time Factors in Early Rabbinic Religiosity — 185
- 11 The Work of Creation in Early Rabbinic Prayers and Benedictions — 203
- 12 Viewing the Other: Attitudes towards Non-Jews in Medieval Jewish Prayer — 221
- 13 The Notion of the Nation: How Hebrew Terminology Has Adjusted to Changing Circumstances — 241

D Jewish Scholars

- 14      How a Jewish Scribe in Early Modern Poland Attempted to Alter a Hebrew Linguistic Register — 259
- 15      A Fresh Look at Adolf Neubauer (1832–1906) as Scholar, Librarian and Jewish Personality — 273
- 16      M. H. Segal (1876–1968) and his Abiding Interest in Ben Sira — 295
- 17      A Scholar's Scholar: Naphtali Wieder, 1905–2001 — 313
- 18      Erwin I. J. Rosenthal (1904–1991): Hebraic and Judaic Studies from Heilbronn to Cambridge — 331

Index of sources — 347

Index of names — 351

Indexes of subjects, rites and prayers, and places — 357