Acknowledgments

First, I would like to thank Pieter Muysken of the University of Amsterdam for having called my attention to the need for a book on morphology. In fact, this book was begun during my stay from 1979 to 1980 at the Institute of General Linguistics at the University of Amsterdam, a true "paradise" for a theoretical linguist, because of the richness of the debate, and the diversity of the points of view which it offered, as well as its excellent library. I am indebted to the CNR/ZWO for a scholarship which helped make this year in Amsterdam possible. While in Holland, I benefited greatly from lengthy discussions with members of the Linguistic Institute in Amsterdam, in particular Hans den Besten, Simon Dik, Pieter Muysken, Henk van Riemsdijk, Norval Smith and Irene Vogel. I also had very interesting discussions with other Dutch colleagues, in particular, Minne G. de Boer of the University of Utrecht, Geert Booij of the Free University of Amsterdam, and Harry van der Hulst and Michael Moortgat of the University of Leiden.

I would like to extend my warmest thanks to Mark Aronoff, Pieter Muysken and Irene Vogel for having read an earlier version of this book from beginning to end; their comments and insights have been most valuable. In particular, I thank Irene Vogel for her help throughout every phase of this book's preparation, especially for the irreplaceable combination of encouragment and constructive criticism she offered me. I also thank Enzo Lo Cascio and Marina Nespor of the University of Amsterdam, Maria Luisa Altieri Biagi, Andrea Fassó and Luigi Rosiello of the University of Bologna, Giorgio Graffi and Paolo Ramat of the University of Pavia, and Giulio Lepschy of the Reading University who read and commented on earlier versions of parts of the manuscript. Thanks also go to my students in the courses from 1981 to 1982 and from 1983 to 1984 at the University of Venice for their helpful criticism.

I am also greatly indebted to the person who taught me respect both for linguistics and for research in general, Luigi Heilmann of the University of Bologna, who has been a true "maestro" for me. Special thanks go to my son, Sandro, who helped me through critical periods, showing great patience and maturity. Finally, I would like to express my gratitute to the editor of Foris, Henk La Porte, for his infinite courtesy and to the directors of the series, Henk van Riemsdijk and Jan Koster, for their constant encouragement.
