

CONTENTS

PART III

THE PROBLEM OF THE FREEDOM OF THE WILL

(THE METAPHYSIC OF MORALS)

Section I

PRELIMINARY CRITICAL QUESTIONS

CHAPTER	PAGE
I. THE CONNECTIONS OF THE PROBLEM	19
(a) Man's Power to Choose	19
(b) Man as the Mediator between Value and Actuality	21
(c) Freedom Independent of Decisions in Single Cases	22
(d) Extreme Cases as a Test	25
(e) The Problem of Freedom, Its Methodological Position	27
II. HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT OF THE PROBLEM OF FREEDOM	29
(a) Preliminary History	29
(b) The Detachment of the Ethical from the Religious Problem of Freedom	32
(c) The Kantian Antinomy of Freedom	33
III. ERRONEOUS CONCEPTIONS OF FREEDOM	37
(a) The Three Typical Sources of Error in the Treatment of the Problem	37
(b) Moral and Legal Freedom, Can and May	39
(c) Freedom of Action and Freedom of Will	40
(d) "Outward" Freedom, as Misunderstood	42
(e) "Inner" (Psychological) Freedom, as Misunderstood	44
(f) The Fundamental Error in Negative Freedom of Choice	48

Section II

THE CAUSAL ANTINOMY

CHAPTER	PAGE
IV. THE SIGNIFICANCE OF KANT'S SOLUTION	53
(a) The Projection of the Intelligible World into the World of Appearance	53
(b) The Causal Nexus and the Something More in Determination	54
(c) Kant's Transcendental Idealism, Its Solution	56
(d) The Twofold Stratification of the World, Causal Nexus and Moral Law	59
V. DETERMINISM AND INDETERMINISM	62
(a) The Radical Elimination of Conceptual Errors	62
(b) The Mistake of Ethical Naturalism and Psychologism	63
(c) The Error of Indeterminism	65
(d) The Teleological Conception of the World, its Claim in the Question of Freedom	67
(e) The Error of Finalistic Determinism	69
VI. DETERMINISM, CAUSAL AND FINALISTIC	73
(a) Metaphysical Paradoxes	73
(b) A Reference Back to the Law of Categorical Dependence	75
(c) The Ontological Dependence of the Finalistic upon the Causal Nexus	77
(d) Categorical Freedom of Teleology above the Causal Nexus	79
(e) Causal Monism, its Inversion of the Categorical Law of Freedom	81
(f) Finalistic Monism, its Inversion of the Basic Law of the Categories	82
(g) Metaphysical Mechanism and Pantheism	84
VII. ONTOLOGICAL REGULARITY AS THE BASIS OF FREEDOM	86
(a) The Appearance of Determinative Dualism	86
(b) Types of Determination, their Ontological Relation to Stratification	88
(c) The General Twofold Law of Strength and Freedom	92
(d) The General Grades of Categorical Freedom and the Special Case of Freedom of Will	96

CONTENTS

13

Section III

THE ANTINOMY OF THE OUGHT

CHAPTER	PAGE
VIII. CRITICISM OF THE KANTIAN DOCTRINE OF FREEDOM	101
(a) The Causal Antinomy: its Limit	101
(b) The πρῶτον ψεύδος of "Transcendental Freedom"	102
(c) The Ought and the Will: the Second Antinomy of Freedom	104
(d) The Kantian Problem of Freedom and That of the Religious Scholastics	108
IX. FALSE WAYS OF PROVING THE FREEDOM OF THE WILL	111
(a) The So-Called "Proofs" of the Freedom of the Will in General	111
(b) Fichte's Freedom Behind Consciousness	112
(c) The "Nullification of Freedom" by Fichte in his Later Years	115
(d) Schelling: Freedom, Apparent and Absolute	117
(e) Leibniz' Theory of the Absolute Self-Development of the Monad	120
(f) Schopenhauer's Doctrine Concerning Intelligible Character	123
X. THE PRESENT STATE OF THE PROBLEM	126
(a) Conclusions Concerning the Nature of Freedom	126
(b) The Aporiæ Inherent in Moral Freedom	127
(c) The Third Antinomy of Freedom Behind the Second	130

Section IV

ETHICAL PHENOMENA, THEIR EFFICACY AS PROOFS

XI. "PROOFS" OF METAPHYSICAL OBJECTS	137
(a) The Impossibility of Proving the Freedom of the Will	137
(b) Phenomena and Metaphysical Objects	139
(c) Possible Methods of Proof, the Different Types	140

CHAPTER	PAGE
XII. MORAL JUDGMENT AND THE CONSCIOUSNESS OF SELF-DETERMINATION	143
(a) The Argument from Moral Judgment	143
(b) The Consciousness of Self-Determination as a General Accompaniment of Action	145
(c) The Consciousness of Self-Determination and the Self-Determination of Consciousness	146
(d) The Reverse Side of the Alternative and the Burden of Proof for Scepticism	149
(e) The Phenomenon, Its Metaphysical Import	151
XIII. RESPONSIBILITY AND ACCOUNTABILITY	154
(a) Responsibility as a Fact of Ethical Reality	154
(b) Bearing of Responsibility as a Sign of Personal Freedom	155
(c) Accountability and the Capacity and Claim Thereto	157
(d) The Basic Ethical Capacity of the Person	161
(e) The Categorical Self-Suppression of Ethical Scepticism	163
(f) The Reality and the Appearance of Freedom. Metaphysical Weight of the Argument	166
XIV. THE CONSCIOUSNESS OF GUILT	172
(a) The Sense of Guilt, Conscience, Remorse and the Will to Guilt	172
(b) The Strength of the Argument	175
(c) The Ideal and Real Essence of the Individual Person	177
XV. SUPPLEMENTARY GROUPS OF FACTS	179
XVI. OUGHT AND THE WILL	182
(a) Gaps in the Argument	182
(b) The Weft of the Non-Identity of the Ought and the Will	183
(c) The Part Played by the Purely Valuational Antinomies and by the Empirical Conflict of Values	185
(d) The Part Played by the Values of Personality as the Basis of Freedom	187
(e) Personality, Its Ideal and Actual Autonomy	190
(f) Freedom under Law and Freedom above Law	192
(g) The Antinomy of the Autonomies	196

CONTENTS

15

Section V

ONTOLOGICAL POSSIBILITY OF PERSONAL FREEDOM

CHAPTER	PAGE
XVII. AUTONOMY OF THE PERSON AND DETERMINATION OF VALUES	205
(a) The Question of the Possibility of Personal Freedom	205
(b) The Threefold Stratification of the Determinational Types	206
(c) The Finalistic Difficulty in Freedom and Its Solution	209
XVIII. SOLUTION OF THE OUGHT-ANTINOMY	213
(a) The Inner Conflict in Free Will as the Moral Will	213
(b) Solution of the Conflict. Exposure of Equivocations	214
(c) The Conflict of the Two Factors in Moral Freedom	217
(d) The Complementary Relation behind the Apparent Conflict	218
(e) The Recurrence of "Negative Freedom" in the Ought-Antinomy	221
(f) The Scope of "Negative" Freedom and its True Relation to "Positive" Freedom	223
(g) Reciprocal Conditionality of Positive and Negative Freedom with regard to Values	225
(h) Two-sided Freedom in the Self-Determination of the Person	228
XIX. PROBLEMS STILL UNSOLVED	231
(a) The Difficulty Concerning Individuality in Moral Freedom	231
(b) The Positive Relation between Universal and Individual Autonomy	232
(c) The Question as to the Nature of the Individual Determinant	234
(d) Personal Teleology as a Determinational Mode of Positive Freedom	237

CONTENTS

	PAGE
(e) The Ontological Difficulty in Personal Freedom	239
(f) The Categorical Structure of the Complex Conditioning-Relationship	240
(g) Moral and Categorical Freedom	243
(h) The Limit to the Problem	246

Section VI

APPENDIX TO THE DOCTRINE OF FREEDOM

CHAPTER

XX. APPARENT AND REAL DEFECTS OF THE THEORY	251
XXI. ETHICAL AND RELIGIOUS FREEDOM	260
INDEX	275