

Table of Contents

VOLUME III/1

Introduction

|                                        |   |
|----------------------------------------|---|
| The 'Identity Reader' Project .....    | 1 |
| Maria Todorova: Modernism ..... | 4 |

Chapter I.

Making of the modern state in a multi-national context

|                                                                                                                                   |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| František Palacký: The idea of the Austrian state .....                                                                    | 25  |
| Adolf Fischhof: Austria and the guarantee of its existence .....                                                           | 34  |
| Jan Palárik: What should we expect from the Hungarian constitution for our nationality and what do we need most now? ..... | 43  |
| József Eötvös: The nationality question .....                                                                              | 50  |
| Franjo Rački: Yugoslavism .....                                                                                            | 57  |
| Lovro Toman: To compatriots! .....                                                                                         | 67  |
| Ferenc Deák: The Easter article .....                                                                                      | 74  |
| Aleksander Świętochowski: Political directives .....                                                                       | 84  |
| Mehmed-beg Kapetanović Ljubušak: What Mohammedans in Bosnia think ....                                                     | 90  |
| Aleksa Šantić: Stay here .....                                                                                             | 94  |
| Karl Renner: State and nation .....                                                                                        | 99  |
| Ziya Gökalp: What is Turkism? .....                                                                                        | 109 |

Chapter II.

Self-determination, democratization, and the homogenizing state

|                                                                                                          |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Draga Dejanović: To Serbian mothers .....                                                         | 119 |
| Kalliroi Parren: The life of one year. Letters from an Athenian to a Parisian lady, 1896–97 ..... | 125 |
| Maria Dulebianka: The political stance of woman .....                                             | 131 |
| Tarnovo Constitution .....                                                                               | 140 |
| Pera Todorović: Speech at the assembly of the People's Radical Party in Kragujevac .....          | 145 |
| Stjepan Radić: Speech at the night assembly of the national council on 24 November, 1918 .....    | 151 |

|                                                                 |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Josip Vilfan: The speech in the Italian Parliament ..... | 161 |
| Alexandros Papanastasiou: Republican manifesto .....     | 167 |
| Faik Konitza: The political crisis in Albania .....      | 175 |
| Halide Edib: The Turkish ordeal .....                    | 180 |
| Edvard Beneš: Democracy today and tomorrow .....         | 187 |

Chapter III. “National projects” and their regional framework

|                                                                                   |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Tomáš G. Masaryk: The Czech question .....                                 | 199 |
| Heinrich Friedjung: The struggle for supremacy in Germany, 1859–1866 ..... | 210 |
| Yusuf Akçura: Three types of policy .....                                  | 218 |
| Jovan Cvijić: On national work .....                                       | 227 |
| Ismail Qemali: Memorandum sent to Lord Edward Grey .....                   | 234 |
| Ivan Cankar: The Slovenes and the Yugoslavs .....                          | 241 |
| Frano Supilo: The memorandum to Sir Edward Grey, 7 January, 1915 .....     | 250 |
| Eleftherios Venizelos: The program of his foreign policy .....             | 258 |
| Anton Strashimirov: Book of the Bulgarians .....                           | 267 |
| Program of the Yugoslav Muslim Organization .....                          | 274 |
| Ján Lajčiak: The Slovak as a national individuality .....                  | 281 |
| István Bibó: On European balance and peace .....                           | 291 |

Chapter IV. Federalism and the decline of the empires

|                                                                                                |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Stjepan Radić: Slavic politics in the Habsburg monarchy .....                           | 303 |
| Aurel C. Popovici: The United States of Greater Austria .....                           | 312 |
| Oszkár Jászi: The future of the Monarchy .....                                          | 319 |
| Prince Sabahaddin: A second account on individual initiative and decentralization ..... | 331 |
| Georgios Bousios: The political program of Hellenism in Turkey .....                    | 338 |
| Tomáš G. Masaryk: The New Europe .....                                                  | 344 |
| Anton Melik: A nation in the making .....                                               | 353 |
| Dimitar Mihalchev: Is unitary and integral Yugoslavia possible? .....                   | 360 |
| Józef Piłsudski: Address delivered in Vilnius .....                                     | 368 |
| Michal Römer: Answer to Józef Piłsudski .....                                           | 376 |
| Milan Hodža: Federation in Central Europe .....                                         | 382 |

Chapter V. Socialism and the nationality question

|                                                    |     |
|----------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Hristo Botev: The people .....              | 393 |
| Svetozar Marković: Serbia in the East ..... | 399 |
| Józef Piłsudski: On patriotism .....        | 405 |

|                                                                                                  |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Bohumír Šmeral: The national question and the social democrats .....                      | 412 |
| Constantin Dobrogeanu-Gherea: Neo-serfdom .....                                           | 419 |
| August Cesarec: The national question and our missions .....                              | 426 |
| Otto Bauer: The Austrian revolution .....                                                 | 436 |
| Abraham Benaroya: The socialist frenzy of two decades .....                               | 444 |
| Attila József: By the Danube .....                                                        | 450 |
| Michal Chorváth: The Romantic face of Slovakia .....                                      | 456 |
| Nazım Hikmet: The legend of the national militia .....                                    | 468 |
| The fundamental principles of the Liberation Front .....                                  | 475 |
| Josip Broz Tito: National question in Yugoslavia in the light of the Liberation War ..... | 481 |

