

Table of Contents

Foreword	xiii
Acknowledgements	xvii
Preface	xix
1 Jewish orphanages in Dutch society	1
2 1890 to 1929: A long and difficult period	15
2.1 Making do at Stille Rijn no. 4	15
2.2 The children of the Stille Rijn	22
2.3 1926: Sally Montezinos arrives, two and a half years old	24
2.4 1927-1928: Mimi Weiman (nine), Reina Segal (three), and Harry Spier (three) arrive	25
3 1929: A magnificent new home	29
4 1929 to 1933: Happy years	39
4.1 The new building	39
4.2 1929: Hans Kloosterman and Mieke Dagloonder arrive, two years old	42
4.3 Mimi Weiman and her friends; the “new” orphanage has landed	45
4.4 Going to school	46
4.5 A small boy from Palestine	53
4.6 1932: A ceremonial photograph	54
5 1933 to 1939: Clouds over Europe	59
5.1 1933: Adolf Hitler becomes Chancellor of Germany	59
5.2 The first refugee children from the East arrive in Leiden	62
5.3 1934: Life goes on; another ceremonial photograph	71
5.4 1935: Piet de Vries arrives, ten years old	75
5.5 The family of Director Italie	79
5.6 1938: Kristallnacht (9 th /10 th November) and the Kindertransports	81
5.7 1938: Henny and Lotte Adler arrive, eight and thirteen years old	84
5.8 1938: A photo album for Governor Levisson	88

6	1940 to 1942: Occupation, oppression, persecution	95
6.1	10 th May 1940: Germany invades the Netherlands	95
6.2	1940: The anti-Jewish campaign starts early	97
6.3	1941: The first razzias, the February Strike, and deportations to Mauthausen	102
6.4	Schools are closed for Jewish children	107
6.5	1942: The arrival of Hijme and Emilie Stoffels-van Brussel	114
6.6	Camp Westerbork and the deportations to Auschwitz	117
6.7	The staff in 1942	123
6.8	Late arrivals, late departures	127
7	1943 to 1944: Liquidation	135
7.1	The situation in late 1942	136
7.2	Sally Montezinos becomes “an old hand” in the orphanage	137
7.3	January 1943: Jewish institutions are not safe at all	139
7.4	17 th March 1943: The orphanage is liquidated	144
7.5	Westerbork, a camp of “hope and despair”	150
7.6	Sobibor and the “Final Solution”	153
7.7	The miraculous release of Hans Kloosterman and Piet de Vries	157
7.8	March to June 1943: Letters from Westerbork	161
7.9	The transport of 4 th May 1943	165
7.10	The transports of 18 th and 25 th May and 1 st June 1943	167
7.11	Etty and Harry in Westerbork and the efforts of the Joodse Raad	169
7.12	Jacob Philipson and Jozua Klein and their families	174
8	So many more	183
8.1	Karel van Santen	184
8.2	Barend Bora Kool	191
8.3	Jacques Witteboon is deported from France	192
8.4	Alexander Lipschits is caught in Belgium	193
8.5	So many more – the family of Sally Montezinos	199
9	1943 to 1946: Survivors	203
9.1	Helga and Kurt Gottschalk escape on the SS Bodegraven	204
9.2	Betsy Wolff and her fictitious father	212
9.3	Mindel Färber escapes from Bergen-Belsen by Austausch train	221
9.4	Aron Wolff (Ronnie de Paauw) becomes “Ronald Witteveen”	228
9.5	Didia Klein survives Auschwitz I	246
9.6	Bram Degen invents his own father	249

9.7	Lodi Cohen escapes to Spain	253
9.8	Herman Stofkooper escapes to Switzerland	265
9.9	Elchanan Italie survives in Germany as “Johannes Bonnet”	276
10	After the war	283
10.1	Where are they? The intolerable uncertainty	287
10.2	Reunited, but without the father	290
10.3	Recognition for the righteous	292
10.4	The perpetrators: Was justice done?	298
10.5	The next generation	306
	Epilogue	311
	List of abbreviations and acronyms	315
	Dutch or German words used in the text	319
	List of 168 children and 9 staff who lived in the orphanage (1929-1943)	323
	Bibliography	331
	Persons index	347
	Subjects index	352

