

Acknowledgments

The research presented in this monograph was made possible by a research grant from the Dutch Research Council (NWO) under the VENI talent scheme, for the three-year project ‘Defining “Europe” in Medieval European Geographical Traditions’. The Open Access publication of this book was made possible by a further generous grant by the NWO Open Access Books programme. I would like to thank NWO also for granting an extension of the project for the writing of this book, and Utrecht University, the Department of Languages, Literature and Communication, the Institute for Cultural Enquiry, and the Center for Medieval Studies for supporting this project. Kiki Calis was research assistant on the project and collected the data for the project’s manuscript database. In the course of the project, invaluable guidance, help, support on all aspects of practicalities, logistics, finances, administration, and scholarship was provided without fail by so many colleagues that it would be impossible to list all names without doubling the wordcount of the volume.

For the book itself also it is impossible to name everyone to whom my gratitude extends. The generosity of colleagues and friends with their time and in sharing their work has been invaluable both before and also during the crisis that started in spring 2020, when access to literature was made more difficult by library closures. I am grateful to Sarah Centili for making her doctoral thesis available to me, and to Maria Teresa Rachetta for her article on Brunetto Latini. To Sif Ríkharðsdóttir I am grateful for sharing a pre-publication version of her article on the Norse Charlemagne material. I also wish to thank Robert Hoyland for helping alleviate the effects of my embarrassing illiteracy in Hebrew. Many thanks also to the reviewers for their insightful comments on the final draft of the book, transmitted to me via Amsterdam University Press. Any residual errors or inaccuracies are, of course, my own.

I would also like to thank Shannon Cunningham, Victoria Blud, Julie Benschop-Plokker, Chantal Nicolaes and their colleagues at Amsterdam University Press who have made the process towards publication of this book such a smooth and enjoyable one.

The support, patience, and generosity of many colleagues, teachers and friends in sharing their time, their research, their good humour, their friendship, made this book possible.

Thank you.
