

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

As the product of a remarkable multinational cooperation, this book benefited from the contributions of scores of individuals and institutions in the Czech Republic, Slovakia, the U.S., Russia, Poland, Germany, Hungary, France and Italy. The authors' team and the National Security Archive would particularly like to thank the following:

- The members and staff of the former Governmental Commission of the Czechoslovak Federal Republic for the Analysis of the Events of 1967–1970. In addition to the authors' team, these included Prof. Vojtěch Mencl, Dr. Miloš Bárta, Dr. František Janáček, Dr. Eduard Kubů, Dr. Ondřej Felcman, Dr. Josef Belda, Dr. Karel Krátky, Ivana Ryzcová, Anna Marková, and Alexandra Janácková. On the parallel Slovak Committee were Dr. Jozef Žatkuliak and Dr. Josef Jablonický. (From the authors' team, Marie Michálková also contributed the chronology of events.)

- The President of the Czech Republic, Václav Havel, for contributing the Preface to this volume, receiving the multinational participants in this project at the Prague Castle, and helping make available key documents from Russian archives.

- Prof. H. Gordon Skilling, an early supporter of this project and eminent participant in the jointly organized international conference in Prague in 1994, as well as contributor of the Foreword to this volume.

- The members of the President's Office (Prague) who provided essential support for the efforts leading to this book, namely Luboš Dobrovský, Ivan Medek, and Pavel Seifter.

- Prof. Radomír Luža, for his significant role from the very beginning in making possible the collaboration between the authors' team and the National Security Archive, especially during the preparations for the 1994 international conference in Prague and for the publication of this reader.

- Drahomira Vohryzková, for her vital role as intermediary between Prague and Washington in the final stages of book preparation.

- Dr. Vilém Prečan, the director of the Institute for Contemporary History, Academy of Sciences of the Czech Republic, where the documentary collections gathered by the Commission are preserved, and which sponsors the ongoing publication in Czech of the documentary record of the Prague Spring. The Institute has granted permission for those materials from its collections to be reproduced in this volume, while accepting no responsibility for the accuracy of the English translations.

- Prof. Jiří Valenta, former director of the Institute of International Relations in Prague, for encouraging this project at the beginning and making arrangements to support this work in the Institute.

- The many international scholars and archivists who contributed documents and analyses incorporated in this book, especially the Russian archivist Dr. Rudolf G. Pikhoya; the German historians Prof. Manfred Wilke, Prof. Lutz Priess, Prof. Rudiger Wenzke; the Polish historians Florian Siwicki and Lech Kowalski; and the Hungarian historian Iván Pataki.

• Dr. Mark Kramer of the Harvard Project on Cold War Studies, who contributed significantly to this book through his translations, annotations, glossary work and selections of additional documents, and who has done some of the most important recent work analyzing these materials and the wider universe of new evidence on the events of 1968 in Czechoslovakia.

• Ruth Tosek and Joy Moss, who prepared the initial translations of the documents and essays for this book; Malcolm Byrne and Peter Kornbluh of the National Security Archive staff, who performed the final rewrites and copy-editing of the complete text; and Catherine Nielsen and Greg Domber, also of the Archive staff for their assistance in proof-reading the galleys.

• Deborah Harding, whose funding support for this project, first at the German Marshall Fund of the United States and now at the Open Society Institute, made possible the initial travel and the ultimate partnership that produced this book.

• George Soros, Aryeh Neier, Dr. Alfred Stepan, Anthony Richter, and Robert Kushen of the Open Society Institute, New York, whose long-term support for the National Security Archive's partnerships with East and Central Europeans has underwritten this book and many more to come.

• Dr. Adelle Simmons, Dr. Kennette Benedict, and Dr. Kimberly Stanton of the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, Chicago, whose long-standing support for the National Security Archive was vital to the 1994 Prague conference and this book.

• Dr. Marin Strmecki and Dr. Samantha Ravich of the Smith Richardson Foundation, Westport (Connecticut), whose support for the National Security Archive and the Cold War International History Project helped make this book possible.

• P. J. Simmons, whose excellent reconnaissance work on behalf of the Cold War International History Project introduced the National Security Archive to the Commission.

• Dr. Jim Hershberg, Director Emeritus of the Cold War International History Project, who not only dispatched P.J. to Prague, but joined in with enthusiasm and ingenuity in all the resulting projects.

• Our thanks to the ambassador of the Czech Republic in Moscow, Rudolf Slánský, for his help and support in organizing conditions for Czech historians studying the newly available documents in the Russian archives.

• The Hon. William Luers, former U.S. Ambassador to Czechoslovakia, and Wendy Luers, President of the Foundation for Civil Society, for their encouragement and wise advice.

• All those who attended, contributed documents, and presented papers at the International Conference on the Prague Spring, 18–20 April 1994, organized by the Prague Spring 1968 Foundation, the Institute of Contemporary History of the Czech Academy of Sciences, the National Security Archive of George Washington University, and the Cold War International History Project of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. We especially thank the then-Ambassadors to the Czech Republic, the Hon. Adrian Basora of the United States, and the Hon. Alexander Lebedev of the Russian Federation, for their support for and participation in the Prague conference.

• Dr. Frances Pinter, Executive Director of the Center for Publishing Development of the Open Society Institute, and Walda Metcalf and Klára Takácsi-Nagy, former and present directors of the Central European University Press, Budapest, with whom it is a delight to work.

We dedicate this book to the memory of our friend and colleague, Dr. František Janáček, who contributed so significantly to this project, to the work of the Commission, to his country, and to international understanding.
