

Acknowledgments

An earlier version of chapter 7, “African American Children’s Literature: The First One Hundred Years” by Violet J. Harris, was originally published in the Journal of Negro Education, vol. 59, no. 4, 1990, pp. 540-55, <https://doi.org/10.2307/2295311>.

An earlier version of chapter 8, “Critical Indigenous Literacies: Selecting and Using Children’s Books about Indigenous Peoples” by Debbie Reese, was originally published in Language Arts (2016).

Marilisa

I would like to thank my family and friends for supporting me during the various institutional battles and victories she participated in during the writing of this book. An immense thank-you to Sonia Alejandra Rodriguez for bringing her truth and critical eye every day to our many meetings, and her collegueship and support in making this project better. I want to honor my students and colleagues at the Institute of Critical Race and Ethnic Studies at Lehigh — Sirry Alang, Mary Mitzdarfer, Ruben Rosas, Alex Gonzalez, Kevelis Matthews-Alvarado, Faith Roncoroni, Jimmy Hamill, Paige Pagan, and Sam Sorenson — for their amazing creativity and work even when people thought we were all crazy. We were crazy good. At Simmons, while writing this book, Alex Smith, Amber Weinstock, Betty Thompson, Renee Runge, James Smith, Elifgul Buyakora, Kat Keyser, and Natalie Shroud helped me think about the ways kid lit needs to expand to accommodate the next generation. Thank you to the Hazel Dick Leonard Public Scholars Seminar at Simmons, especially Jyoti Puri, for their readings of drafts and comments. To all the educators, who get up early to love our kids and help them see themselves winning.

Sonia Alejandra

I would like to thank my husband for his invaluable support. I’d also like to thank Marilisa for inviting me to be part of this project. Marilisa, your faith in me and your trust in my expertise, has meant the world to me. Thank you to all my teachers and to my fellow educators, librarians, and practitioners. Also, thank you to Rebecca Colesworthy, Mary Jo Bona, Derrick Brooms, Ivory A. Toldson, and Sandra L. Osorio. Finally, thank you to our amazing contributors: Alissa, Lara, Blessy, Jung, Reanae, Traci, and Alia!

