

Contents

List of Illustrations	ix
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction: Naive Film Criticism	1

Part One. V. F. Perkins

1	Film as Film in the Twenty-First Century	19
2	V. F. Perkins and the Redescription of Films	41

Part Two. Stanley Cavell

3	“Not Yet the Last”: On a Paragraph by Stanley Cavell	65
4	Cavellian Reflections on Privacy, Consent, and Expression in Ildikó Enyedi’s On Body and Soul (Testről és lélekről)	89
5	(Re)producing Marriage: Stanley Cavell and Paul Thomas Anderson’s Phantom Thread	107
6	Experience, Skepticism, and Idolatry in Stanley Kubrick, Nicholas Lash, and Stanley Cavell	129

Part Three. Figurations

- | | | |
|---|--|-----|
| 7 | The Shape of It All: Priorities and Completeness in
Nicole Brenez's Work on Abel Ferrara | 151 |
| 8 | Rupture, Suture, Nietzsche: Impossible Intersubjectivity
in Ridley Scott's Alien | 171 |
| 9 | Hypnosis-Images: Indiscernibility and Hypnotic Agency in Gilles Deleuze's Heart of Glass | 195 |

Part Four. Tarkovsky and Reichardt

- | | | |
|----|--|-----|
| 10 | "You Can't Imagine How Terrible It Is to Make the Wrong Choice": Faith, Agency, and Self-pity
in Andrei Tarkovsky's Stalker | 217 |
| 11 | Kelly and Andrei in the Zone | 241 |
| 12 | "A Fair Curve from a Noble Plan": Kelly Reichardt's
Certain Women | 249 |
| | Notes | 275 |
| | Works Cited | 303 |
| | Filmography | 317 |
| | Index | 321 |