

Acknowledgments

From Joshua: Above all else, thank you Natalie and Harper for your enduring support for all my work. Thank you, Natalie, for always listening to my long-winded explanations of my research projects, and thank you, Harper—in your two years of wisdom—for all your assistance with my writing. I just hope I found all the random keystrokes you have added to these documents along the way. As well, I offer a special thank-you to my professional network, especially those who have supported me through this project, namely Jack Sargent and all my Kean University colleagues, most notably those within the Communication, Media, and Journalism Department and the College of Liberal Arts. Finally, I am distinctly grateful for my students, especially the founding members of Anarchoic Chamber: Liliana Carredo and Kevin Stone. As I work to sharpen your skills, please know that you have helped sharpen mine and that you have positively shaped me in more ways than you know.

From Alan: To my mom, dad, and brother, who have led me to stories where a single person makes a terrifying decision but ends up changing the world. Thank you, Ken McAllister, for sharpening my vision and teaching me, however unconventionally, what it means to be a professional. And, as befitting her name, the queen's share of my gratitude always goes to Regina.

From Joshua and Alan: We both express our sincerest gratitude to the editorial team at State University of New York Press, especially Michael Rinella, whose guidance has been invaluable throughout. We are also grateful for the insight of our anonymous reviewers. Your feedback helped us substantially and our volume is markedly stronger because of your efforts. Most importantly, this project is only possible with the confidence, brilliance, and labor of the authors featured in this volume. We are immensely thankful for your contributions.
