

Contents/Inhalt

Maïke Oergel (Nottingham)

Britain, Germany, and Brexit: The ‘Cradle of Democracy’ and the ‘Heart of Europe’ as Different Legacies of the Nineteenth-century Idea of the ‘Germanic’ — 1

Thematic Focus/Themenschwerpunkt:

British German Studies and the World Wars

Guest Editors: Sophia Buck, Andreas Schmid

Sophia Buck, Andreas Schmid (Oxford)

A Discipline at War: British German Studies, 1914–1945 — 31

Sofia Derer (Heidelberg)

Women Students, Philology, and the War: The ‘First Chapter’ of Modern Language Study at Cambridge, 1883–1917 — 55

Christopher T. Husbands (London)

German-/Austrian-origin Professors of German in British Universities During the First World War — 87

Catherine Mason (London)

Dictators of Taste? The Origins and Reach of Hermann Fiedler’s Oxford Book of German Verse (1916) and Jethro Bithell’s Anthology of German Poetry (1941) — 131

Andrea Meyer Ludowisy, Richard Espley, Ulrich Tiedau (London)

The Collective Unconscious of the University of London’s German Studies Collections: Reflecting, Resisting and Remaking Anglo-German Relations on Library Shelves in the Era of the World Wars — 171

Frederic Ponten (Regensburg)

“We help to pull a Jaggenath car”: Eliza M. Butler, Jane E. Harrison and the History of British German Studies (1914–1949) — 207

Sasha Bolot (London)

Appeasing Germany: Raymond Beazley and his Contribution to the Debate in Britain During the Interwar Years — 241

David Yeandle (London)

“The Incarnation of German Studies”: John L. Flood (1938–2021) [Obituary] — 261

John L. Flood †

“King’s Ain’t What It Used To Be!”: Some Notes on the Staff of the German Department in the Years 1965–1969. A Memento for the Class of ’69 to mark the Golden Jubilee of their Graduation — 269

Reviews/Rezensionen — 285