As the official journal of the Asia-Pacific Risk and Insurance Association, the Asia-Pacific Journal of Risk and Insurance (APJRI) focuses on risk management and insurance issues of importance to the Asia-Pacific region. An interdisciplinary publication, APJRI facilitates the exchange of research in risk and insurance mathematics, economics, finance, and corporate practice. The journal welcomes theoretical and applied research papers on a variety of specific topics including, but not limited to:

- actuarial pricing and reserving
- insurance operations, economics, and regulation
- corporate/enterprise risk management and finance
- catastrophe risk
- social insurance and employee benefits
- local/regional/international insurance markets

Submitted manuscripts must not have been published elsewhere, and are subject to double-blind peer-review at the discretion of the editors.
