Journal of Benefit-Cost Analysis (JBCA) seeks to improve the analytical practice of benefit-cost analysis and to expand scholarly knowledge. Its scope includes topics in social policy such as education, crime, poverty, and employment; as well as in environment, health, energy, natural hazards, terrorism, defense, and other areas to which benefit-cost analysis and related tools can be applied. Articles that skillfully apply benefit-cost tools are especially encouraged as are theoretical papers with some link to empirical application. All levels of analysis are sought: international, national, state, regional, and local. Authors focusing on principles and standards, reviews of areas of application, and shorter pieces that demonstrate implementable „skills of the trade“, are also encouraged but they should contact the Editor at JBCA@umbc.edu prior to submission.
