

Contents

Acknowledgments | 7

Introduction

Towards a Reconceptualization of Trauma | 9

Chapter One: Theorizing Trauma

Romantic and Postmodern Perspectives on Mental Wounds | 27

Chapter Two: The “Wounded Mind”

Feminism, Trauma, and Self-Narration in Mary Wollstonecraft’s
The Wrongs of Woman | 87

Chapter Three: Anatomizing the “Demons of Hatred”

Traumatic Loss and Mental Illness in William Godwin’s Mandeville | 127

Chapter Four: A Tragedy of Incest

Trauma, Identity, and Performativity in Mary Shelley’s Mathilda | 163

Chapter Five: Polluted Daughters

Incestuous Abuse and the Postmodern Tragic
in Jane Smiley’s A Thousand Acres | 203

Chapter Six: Inheriting Trauma

Family Bonds and Memory Ties in Anne Michaels’s Fugitive Pieces | 241

Chapter Seven: The Body of Evidence

Family History, Guilt, and Recovery in Trezza Azzopardi’s
The Hiding Place | 279

Conclusion | 315

Works Cited | 323

