

Acknowledgements

This book is the result of a collaborative effort between the Alberta Global Form (AGF), based at Mount Royal University, and the University of Calgary, Carleton University, and Athabasca University. I am especially grateful to David Taras, who established the How Canadians Communicate series and graciously provided me with the opportunity to envision and realize a volume on the topic of food. I would also like to thank the members of the AGF board, who offered ideas and feedback at the formative stages of this project.

The conference that gave rise to this book received support from various entities. Along with contributions from the universities listed above, generous support was provided by the Canada Research Chairs program, Glacier Media (special thanks to Bill Whitelaw), and Alberta business and community leader Allan Markin. Restaurant reviewer John Gilchrist and Donald House, of Integrated Digital Media Group, Inc., were especially generous with their time and ideas, for which I am most grateful.

Pamela MacFarland Holway of Athabasca University Press provided support and constructive feedback on the volume. Rebecca Carruthers Den Hoed did an excellent job in preparing the manuscript, and was a genuine pleasure to work with. Wayne McCready deserves special mention, not only for his support in the role of director of the Calgary Institute for the Humanities but also for his time, feedback, and friendship throughout.

Quite apart from the stellar participation of the book's contributors, other individuals were instrumental in making the conference event a success: Claire Cummings brought her expertise in organizing the conference, and Corinne McKetiak designed the conference logo and promotional materials. For the kickoff event, warmest thanks go to Canada's Top Chefs,

John Jackson and Connie DeSousa, Xavier Lacaze, and Geoff Rogers; the Calgary Farmers' Market; and Mount Royal University's Greg Ruhl and his Information Design students.

Above all, I would like to thank Tannis Baker, whose ideas, creativity and contributions worked to make the conference—and subsequent volume—a success.