

Acknowledgments

This book was made possible by the generous assistance of a great many individuals and institutions spanning four continents. Regretfully, it is impossible here to acknowledge them all. We can only single out these few for special thanks.

We owe our greatest debts of gratitude to two outstanding teachers: Ronald P. Dore, the former academic advisor of Anita Chan and Jonathan Unger; and Ezra F. Vogel, the principal advisor of Richard Madsen. Their scholarly advice and personal support aided our project considerably.

Our research in Hong Kong was carried out at the Universities Service Centre; and we wish to express our thanks to John Dolfin, the former director of the Centre, for providing us with a work environment that greatly facilitated our research.

We are grateful also to Lau Pok-chi of the University of Kansas. During the summer of 1981 Professor Lau made a trip on our behalf to the countryside near Chen Village to take many of the photographs that appear in this book. His photographs appear on the cover, the frontispiece, and on pp. 15, 44–46, 68, 94, 187, 216, 218, 226, 275, 277, and 283. Two of the authors, Anita Chan and Jonathan Unger, took the other photographs that appear in the book.

For Anita Chan and Jonathan Unger, financial support for the project came from the Institute of Development Studies at the University of Sussex, in England; from the Social Science Research Council of the United Kingdom; from the Nuffield Foundation; from the Center for East Asian Studies, University of Kansas; and from the Contemporary China Centre at the Australian National University. For Richard Madsen, financial support came from a National Institute of Mental Health Comparative International Studies Training Grant and a National Defense Foreign Language fellowship. The book was drafted at the University of Kansas, Harvard University, the University of California at San Diego, the Center for Chinese Studies at the University of California, Berkeley, and the ANU's Contemporary China Centre.

Marc Blecher, John Burns, Deborah Davis, and Edwin Lee graciously shared with us notes from their own interviews with Chen Villagers. B. Michael Frolic, Nancy Kaul, Uldis Kruze, James Nickum, Stanley Rosen, Theda Skocpol, Connie Squire, Judith Strauch, and James Watson read and critiqued various parts of our manuscript. Much of the final draft was typed by Nancy Kaul and Patrick James, and Dianne Stacey assisted in preparing the post-Mao chapters.

We are especially thankful to our two and a half dozen interviewees from Chen Village, who gave us so much of their time and entrusted to us the memories and knowledge upon which this book is based. To them this book is gratefully dedicated.
