

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	vii
 Prologue	 1
A Common Aesthetic Theory?	3
Mandalas, Regional Histories, and Archipelagic Nationalisms	6
Chapter Breakdown	13
Beyond Academia	16
1. “Culture Bound” Aesthetics and Archipelagic Form	18
Tanah Air and Cinematic Patchworks	18
The Afflicted Apparatus	23
Colliding Regions, Jumpy Cowboys, Foreign Nations	28
Archipelagic Aesthetics, the Nation, and Fissured Postcolonial Images	34
Disruption vs. Happy Endings in India and Hollywood	38
Southeast Asian Cinemas and Revolution	43
Classical, National, Regional, Global, and Versions Thereof	47
Boeng, Ajo Boeng!	51
2. The Emergence of Archipelagic Aesthetics: Vernacular Theaters and Regional Modernisms	54
Smells like Regional Spirit	54
Vernacular Modernist Theaters	60
Promiscuous Vernacular Theaters, Interactive Modernist Films	66
The Regional Film Market as Modern Pressure Cooker	74
Apparent Anomalies and Dualist Cosmopolitanism	80

3. Archipelagic Modernism and Traditions of Gender:
The Matrifocal Gaze and the “Undecided” Modern Girl	85
Youthful Old Maid Takes On Jakarta	85
The Matrifocal Home vs. the Modern Boy	91
Visuality, Duality, and Blindness	98
The Matrifocal Gaze as Global Anomaly?	103
Histories Made by Women and Men	107
4. Signatures of the Invisible: Southeast Asian Patriarchs and the Feminization of Resistance	116
The Matrifocal, the Bomba, and Their Urban Afterlives	116
New Dictators, Young Activists, and Sex on the Screen	120
New Order, New Instruments	123
Cinematic Critique and the “Prostitution Genre”	130
The Prostitute as Seer and Melodramatic Amplifier	135
Dictators, Politicized Prostitutes, and Urban Mud in the Philippines	144
Protest, Prostitution, and “Flexible Members” in Bangkok	154
Prostitutes, Conjugal Dictators, and the Return of Feminine Actors	161
5. Monstrous Feminine Superheroes: The Order of the Other and Regional Screens	168
Private Parts in Laguna	168
Bared Rocks in Parangkusumo	172
Supranational Icon	179
Feminine Spirits vs. Kiai ex Machina	185
The Divisible Feminine Signifier	192
A Regional Pantheon of National-Political Phantoms and Spirit Doubles	196
Canny Regional Ghosts, Enduring Archipelagic Cinemas	203
6. Reclaiming Affect: Freedom, Reform, and Many Historical Returns	207
All Roads Lead to Vernacular Theaters	210
Ghosts, Holes, and Soto Reborn	214
The Neoliberal Power Couple	217
The Thai New Wave, the Postmodern, and the Reclamation of Affect	227
Regional Infrastructures and the Expansion of Archipelagic Imaginations	236
Setanism, the Archaic Mother, and the Living Female “Ghost”	240
Notes	249
References	261
Index	273