

Acknowledgments

When a long-term project is completed it is customary to express gratitude to all those who helped to make it possible. Usually the most notable supporters are named first, and apologies are extended in the end to all those contributors whose names have accidentally gone unmentioned. In a study such as this one, the unnamed “others” who merit acknowledgment are not so much forgotten as they are recognized and respected by the very fact of their omission. I mean, in particular, the men and women who constitute the UFO community, some of whom request anonymity. Their willingness to share their stories publicly in print and on film, and with me personally and privately, has made my work possible. In addition, I would like to offer my thanks —

To Greg Robbins and Mike Kalton, who helped me learn how (but not what) to think again.

To Liz Clark, for her consistent efforts to imbue my thought with greater rigor and clarity.

To Grant Wacker and Russell Richey, for daring to go where few men have gone before, and to Leigh DeNeef for being willing to help me along the way.

To Harry Partin for his unflagging belief that I had the right stuff.

To Jean O’Barr and Francesca, for Jean’s commitment to this woman’s studies.

To Jackson Carroll, who helped me begin to learn how to make numbers speak, and to Cheryl E., who pressed me for greater clarity.

To the St. Michael the Archangel Fund for its generous support and encouragement.

To Coralyn Bolt, who helped me nourish my dreams of learning more about religion.

To Rod K. and Katherine B., whose energizing presence came at just the right time.

To Nora Gottlieb, Melissa R., and Darlyne M. — people whose friendship is without duplication. And to Darlyne, for helping to make the tedious task of data entry fun!

To George Fawcett, for the use of his UFO library. A pioneer of ufology in North Carolina, George is a treasure trove of information and great good-will. I don't care what the geneticists say, there's no one like George!

To Gilbert G., for his critical review of, yet unqualified support for, my project.

To the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion and to The Geneva Companies, which provided me with sorely needed research funds.

To Kenneth Ring and the Omega Project, for permission to use their survey items.

To the staff at Perkins Library, particularly to Eric Smith and to those incomparable folks in the Inter-Library Loan office, without whose help my research would have been considerably foreshortened.

To the Full Story Group of North Carolina and the late Nick Summers, to the UFO Awareness Group of North Carolina, to Walt Andrus and Wayne LaPorte (and all the NC MUFON gang) of the Mutual UFO Network, to Vicki Lyons and Pat and Buddy Crumbley of Project Awareness, to Lucius Farish of the UFO Newsclipping Service, to Shannon Kluge, and to the many, many individuals who filled out surveys, sent me articles, recommended books, and were willing to share their UFO stories. I hope I have done them — and you — justice.

To my editors at the University of California Press — Doug Abrams Arava (who has since moved on to other projects and places), Reed Malcolm, and Marielle Leon for their interest in and enthusiasm for this project; Jean McAneny and Carolyn Hill for their superb attention to the details that make so much difference in the end; and to Barbara Jellow for her good-humored willingness to take a second look.

And finally to my parents and children, who provided the context and grounding that have kept my life meaningful.
