ILLUSTRATIONS

- "Fifteen thousand white mothers" march across Brooklyn bridge to protest "busing," March 12, 1964 24
- 2. A white mother talks to a television journalist, March 12, 1964 25
- 3. White New Yorkers protest against "busing," March 12, 1964 27
- 4. White parents from Queens (NY) protest the proposed transfer of four hundred black and Puerto Rican students from the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn, June 25, 1959 40
- 5 and 6. School boycott leader Milton Galamison and Parents and Taxpayers' leader Rosemary Gunning, March 6, 1964 47
 - 7. Superintendent Benjamin Willis accused of segregating Chicago's schools, August 15, 1963 60
 - Flyer for Freedom Day school boycott sponsored by the Coordinating Council of Community Organization, October 22, 1963 64
 - 9. A Chicagoan marches in support of the Freedom Day school boycott, October 22, 1963 65
 - 10. White demonstrators gather at the Chicago Board of Education to protest Superintendent Dr. James Redmond's "busing" plan, January 1968 71
 - Whites parents protest Chicago Superintendent Dr. James Redmond's plan to begin school desegregation, January 10, 1968 72
 - 12. Ellen Jackson, leader of Operation Exodus, January 22, 1967 89

- 13. Politician Louise Day Hicks, opponent of school desegregation efforts, January 22, 1967 89
- 14. Florida Governor Claude Kirk addresses media, April 9, 1970 105
- Florida Governor Claude Kirk affirms his opposition to "busing," April 9, 1970 107
- Former Florida Governor Claude Kirk speaks at rally of Parents Against Forced Busing, St. Petersburg, Florida, August 28, 1971 110
- Former Florida Governor Claude Kirk with Irene McCabe, National Action Group Rally, Pontiac, September 26, 1971 112
- 18. President Richard Nixon calls for a moratorium on new "busing" orders, March 16, 1972 115
- 19. Irene McCabe watches President Nixon's televised speech on "busing," March 17, 1972 135
- 20. President Nixon meets with congressmen the day after his televised "busing" speech, March 17, 1972 138
- 21. Irene McCabe, National Action Group Rally, Pontiac, Michigan, September 19, 1971 143
- 22. Irene McCabe speaks to a crowd at "antibusing" rally, Pontiac, September 6, 1971 147
- 23. Irene McCabe in National Action Group t-shirt at "antibusing" meeting, Memphis, September 23, 1971 151
- 24. Walter Cronkite announces Irene McCabe's arrival in Washington, DC, April 27, 1972 159
- 25. "Marching mothers" receive media attention during six-week trek from Pontiac to Washington, DC, April 27, 1972 160
- 26. Televised shot of the marching mothers' feet, April 27, 1972 160
- 27. Irene McCabe addresses crowd, Washington, DC, April 27, 1972 163
- 28. Supporters of the mothers' march on Washington hold signs endorsing McCabe and an "antibusing" constitutional amendment, April 27, 1972 163
- 29. Roy Innis, Congress of Racial Equality national chairman, speaks at 1972 Republican National Convention, Miami, August 17, 1972 182

- 30. Clay Smothers receives a warm welcome from "antibusing" activists in Boston, December 16, 1974 188
- 31 and 32. Police and other law enforcement authorities clash with white "antibusing" protestors, December 11, 1974 198
 - 33. Television anchor John Chancellor profiles South Boston, October 15, 1974 202
 - 34. March against "busing" for school desegregation, August 31, 1975 203
 - 35. A young black student explains her feelings on school desegregation to a television reporter, September 7, 1975 207