

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book was made possible by so many generous and visionary efforts for which the authors are deeply grateful. The stories, insights, and experiences shared with us by participants in the Multi-site Family Study on Incarceration, Parenting and Partnering enabled a new understanding of family life in the context of criminal justice system involvement. We were incredibly fortunate to have had the opportunity to learn from the wisdom and life experiences of individuals and families who had developed this understanding for themselves under profoundly challenging circumstances and often at great cost.

The Multi-site Family Study would not have been possible without the support of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation (ASPE) as well as the Office of Family Assistance (OFA) in the Administration for Children and Families. In particular, this work was enabled by the vision and leadership of Linda Mellgren, Erica Meade, and Jennifer Burnszynski of ASPE and Charisse Johnson of OFA.

In carrying out the study, the four of us were lucky to be joined by a larger team of skilled and committed researchers. The contributions of Justin Landwehr, Erin Kennedy, Danielle Steffey, Stephen Tueller, Derek Ramirez, Kate Krieger, Rose Feinberg, Azot Derecho, and Chris Carson were invaluable. We were also lucky to be guided by many leading thinkers in this field, including Jacinta Bronte-Tinkew, David Cordray, Justin Dyer, Felix Elwert, Maria Kefalas, Wendy Manning, Howard Markman, Kristin Moore, William Oliver, Jeff Smith, and Alford Young and especially for the ongoing and dedicated involvement of Randal Day, Creasie Finney Hairston, Joe Jones, John Laub, Anne Menard, Christy Visser, and Oliver Williams over many years. The work of creating this book was supported and guided by our leadership at RTI International, including Pam Lattimore, Gary Zarkin, Amy Roussel, Robin Weinick, Meera Viswanathan, and Paul Biemer, to whom we are deeply grateful. We were also lucky to have the editing support of Nathan Yates and Felicity Skidmore and the creativity of Ed Roberts to get us over the finish line.

Finally, we are thankful for the phenomenal energy and vision that Maura Roessner brought to this project as our editor and to all the staff at University of California Press who have contributed to bringing it into print.
