

Acknowledgments

It is often said that books are written in solitude, but that wasn't true for this one. The ideas in this book were created in conversation with many wise friends and mentors. I owe them immense gratitude. Michael Sullivan has had an enormous influence on my thinking, and he has continually challenged me to strengthen my philosophical positions. Paul Schwartz has provided countless insights, and his work is foundational for the understanding of privacy law. Both Michael's and Paul's comments on the manuscript have been indispensable. I also must thank Judge Guido Calabresi, Naomi Lebowitz, Judge Stanley Sporkin, and Richard Weisberg, who have had a lasting impact on the way I think about law, literature, and life.

Charlie Sullivan deserves special thanks, although he disagrees with most of what I argue in this book. He has constantly forced me to better articulate and develop my positions. I may never convince him, but this book is much stronger for making the attempt.

So many other people are deserving of special mention, and if I were to thank them all to the extent they deserve, I would more than double the length of this book. Although I only list their names, my gratitude extends much further: Anita Allen, Jack Balkin, Carl Coleman, Howard Erichson, Timothy Glynn, Rachel Godsil, Eric Goldman, Chris Hoofnagle, Ted Janger, Jerry Kang, Orin Kerr, Raymond Ku, Erik Lillquist, Michael Ringer, Marc Rotenberg, Richard St. John, Chris Slobogin, Richard Sobel, Peter Swire, Elliot Turrini, and Benno Weisberg.

I greatly benefited from the comments I received when presenting my ideas, as well as portions of the manuscript, at conferences and symposia at Berkeley Law School, Cornell University, Emory Law School, Minnesota Law School, Seton Hall Law School, Stanford Law School, and Yale Law School.

My research assistants Peter Choy, Romana Kaleem, John Spaccarotella, and Eli Weiss provided excellent assistance throughout the writing of this book. Dean Pat Hobbs and Associate Dean Kathleen Booze of Seton Hall Law School gave me generous support.

Don Gastwirth, my agent, shepherded me through the book publishing process with great enthusiasm and acumen. With unceasing attention, constant encouragement, and superb advice, he helped me find the perfect publisher. Deborah Gershenowitz at NYU Press believed in this project from the start and provided excellent editing.

Finally, I would like to thank my parents and grandparents. Their love, encouragement, and belief in me have made all the difference.

This book incorporates and builds upon some of my previously published work: Privacy and Power: Computer Databases and Metaphors for Information Privacy, 53 Stanford Law Review 1393 (2001); Access and Aggregation: Privacy, Public Records, and the Constitution, 86 Minnesota Law Review 1137 (2002); Digital Dossiers and the Dissipation of Fourth Amendment Privacy, 75 Southern California Law Review 1083 (2002); and Identity Theft, Privacy, and the Architecture of Vulnerability, 54 Hastings Law Journal 1227 (2003). These articles are really part of a larger argument, which I am delighted that I can now present in its entirety. The articles are thoroughly revised, and parts of different articles are now intermingled with each other. The argument can now fully unfold and develop. Privacy issues continue to change at a rapid pace, and even though these articles were written not too long ago, they were in need of updating. The arguments originally made in these articles have been strengthened by many subsequent discussions about the ideas I proposed. I have been forced to think about many issues more carefully and with more nuance. My understanding of privacy is a work in progress, and it has evolved since I began writing about it. This book merely represents another resting place, not the final word.
