

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book would not have been possible without the generosity of time and spirit of many talented individuals. To my editors, Deborah Gershenowitz and Clara Platter, I owe great thanks—to Debby for helping me conceptualize the project and to Clara for helping bring it to fruition. Many colleagues—Bridget Crawford, Nancy Dowd, Debby Denno, Fran Miller, Wendy Parmet, and Liz Rapaport—gave generously of their time, reading many drafts of my proposal and book chapters along the way. Others shared their expertise and insights in the specialized fields of medicine, psychology, and law in which they teach and practice, often reading multiple drafts of chapters and articles and offering invaluable counsel that made this a much better book. This very long list includes Carol Anderson, Noa Ben Asher, Susan Bandes, Adele Bernhard, Anne Bloom, Kathleen Boozang, Melissa Breger, Bennett Capers, Martha Chmallas, Georganne Chapin, Elena Cohen, Karl Coplan, Bernard Dickens, Joshua Dressler, Dorothy Ehrlich, Joseph Espo, Gretchen Flint, Leslie Garfield, Lissa Griffin, Jill Gross, Elaine Heffner, Diana Hortsch, Peter Jacobson, Desiree Kennedy, Ellis Levine, Tom McDonnell, Michelle Oberman, Kathleen O’Connell, Lynn Paltrow, Patti Peppin, Phillipe Pierre, Ann Powers, Dorit Rubinstein Reiss, Marc Rodwin, Sanda Rodgers, Audrey Rogers, Susan Rozelle, Carol Sanger, Renata Schiavo, Janet Severson, Ross Silverman, Jill Sowards, Scott Smith, Deborah Spitalnik, Julia Spring, Audrey Stone, Stephanie Toti, Emily Gold Waldman, Jessica Waters, and Kelly Weisberg.

Pace Law School Deans Michelle Simon and David Yassky and Associate Deans for Research Bridget Crawford and Andrew Lund were incredibly supportive of my research. Associate Deans Horace Anderson and Jeff Miller made it possible for me to carry out my teaching responsibilities and find the needed time to write. My faculty assistants, Jennifer Chin and Kathleen Lambert, have been simply amazing, always going above and beyond the call of duty, helping with all manner of editing, formatting, and researching tasks. The law librarians at Pace Law School, under the extraordinary leadership of Marie Newman, were always knowledgeable and helpful; I give special thanks to Alyson Carney, Vicky Gannon, Jack McNeil, Margaret Moreland, and Cynthia Pittson.

I also want to thank Nancy Northrup and the Center for Reproductive Rights, who gave me a place to think and write during a sabbatical, and to the many friends at conferences who shared their latest research and insights with me. Special thanks go to the participants at the Pace faculty 10/10 research sessions, Fordham University students in Debby Denno's Advanced Criminal Law Seminar, and faculty participants at colloquia sponsored by Albany Law School and the Touro Law Center.

Portions of this book are derived from my previously published articles: The New "Fetal Protection": The Wrong Answer to the Crisis of Inadequate Health Care for Women and Children, 84 Denver University Law Review 537 (2006); Pursuing the Perfect Mother: Why America's Criminalization of Maternal Substance Abuse Is Not the Answer, 15 Michigan Journal of Gender & Law 389 (2009); In the Name of Fetal Protection: Why American Prosecutors Pursue Pregnant Drug Users (and Other Countries Don't), 18 Columbia Journal of Gender and Law 647 (2009); Marketing Mothers' Milk: The Commodification of Breastfeeding and the New Markets for Human Milk and Infant Formula, 10 Nevada Law Journal 29 (2009); Rethinking Addiction: Drugs, Deterrence, and the Neuroscience Revolution, 14 University of Pennsylvania Journal of Law and Social Change 233 (2011); Are Mothers Hazardous to Their Children's Health: Law, Culture, and the Framing of Risk, 21 Virginia Journal of Social Policy and the Law 295 (2014); and Sex, Science, and the Age of Anxiety, 92 Nebraska Law Review 455 (2014). I am grateful to the editors of these journals for their questions, suggestions, and zealous Bluebooking.

I further want to acknowledge the important influence of countless scholars, in law and other disciplines, whose feminist insights have shaped my thinking over many years. This work would not have been possible without their trailblazing work, and I owe them a profound debt of gratitude.

Over the years I have been blessed with extraordinary research assistants who assisted with the research on multiple issues addressed in this book. They include Verona Benjamin, Cassandra Castellano, Malisa Chokshi, Kimberly Pierce Cortes, Heather Deichler, Lynn Donohue, Amanda Evanson, Briana Fedele, Maria Finnochio, Nidhi Garg, Nicole Giordano, Carly Grant, James Healy, Deborah Heller, Timothy Henesy, Heather Ingle, Jennifer Kim, Rebecca King, Gillian Kirsch, Sabrina Lavail, Christine Love, Jennifer McAdam, Lauren Maier, Vito Marzano, Corinne Ortega, Jennifer Ramme, William Rapp, Nicole Sasaki, Jonina Sauer, Jake Sher, Devon Towner, Jennifer Turchetta, Meredith Van Horn, and Sara Wordsworth.

Most important to me has been the encouragement, patience, and support of my family, including my mother, Janet Crandell; my sister, Sandra Fentiman; and my daughters, Jamie and Rachel Levine. Above all, it would have been impossible to bring this book into being without my partner in love and life, Arthur Levine, whose creativity, insightful feedback, sense of humor, and staunch support made all the difference in the world.
