Embarking on this book project led to an exciting personal and professional journey. As a first-generation immigrant to the United States, I have found new networks and friends essential. The research introduced me to many cherished ones to whom I am most grateful.

First, what started as The Religion and Immigration Project (TRIP) co-investigators later became my generous TRIP gang: Lois Lorentzen, Kevin Chun, and Hien Duc Do. Gathering and organizing a treasure trove of migrant narratives would have been impossible without the help of TRIP research associates and fellow Filipino American sojourners, Andrea Maison, Dennis Marzan, and Claudine del Rosario. The research assistance from Glen Andag and Cristina Cortes was also invaluable. Thanks to my wonderful politics and Philippine studies students who patiently administered surveys.

Second, I wish to thank the pastors and congregations from Saint Patrick's Catholic Church, Iglesia ni Cristo, Saint Augustine's Catholic Church, the Daly City United Methodist Church, and many other San Francisco Bay Area churches who shared with us their stories but most of all their hearts, minds, and spirits. They inspired me to no end.

Third, I am grateful for the varying forms of institutional and funding support from the University of San Francisco's College of Arts and Sciences, the Center for the Pacific Rim, the Politics Department, the Maria Elena Yuchengco Philippine Studies Program, the Asian American Studies Program, and the Asian Studies Program; Golden Gate University's Mayor George Christopher Chair in Public Administration and the Edward S. Ageno School of Business; the PEW Charitable Trusts; the Jesuit Foundation; the Kiriyaama Fellowship; Westbay Pilipino Multi-Services Center; the Filipino Education Center; the Veterans Equity Center; the San Francisco Immigrant Rights Commission; and the Philippine Consulate General of San Francisco.

Fourth, I thank my growing circle of friends, family, and colleagues who had to "excuse" me from gatherings, conversations, e-mails, phone calls, and meetings simply because “I’m busy with my book!” Michelle Hong, Elise Gonzalez, and the rest of the Gonzalez and Lucero clans, as well as Rhacel Parreñas, Malou Babilonia, Marylou Salcedo, Barbara Bundy, Gerardo Marin, Jenny Turpin, Eileen Fung, David Kim, Rob Elias, Shalendra Sharma, Brian Weiner, Patrick Murphy, James Taylor, John Nelson, Lorraine Mallare, Lisa Yuchengco, Efren Padilla, Dan Gonzales, Edith Borbon, Sid Valledor, Leo Paz, Bong and Cathy Bengzon, as well as Ed and Rica Campos, were most understanding, patient, and supportive. There are many more.

Finally, I am grateful to Jennifer Hammer at New York University Press and two anonymous reviewers for being piercing but collegial in their comments, feedback, and suggestions.
