
Contributors

Michael P. Armato is pursuing his Ph.D. in sociology at New York University. He earned his M.A. in sociology from the University of Florida in 1997. His research interests include gender, family, and social movements.

Cathleen L. Armstead teaches sociology as an Adjunct Professor at Valencia Community College in Orlando, Florida. As a sociologist she was trained in the interdisciplinary Social Relations program at the University of California at Irvine. She has been engaged in antiracist work as the Director of Research for Democracy Forum in Orlando, Florida (1998–99). Her work has been published in the Encyclopedia of Sociology (1992) and Women's Studies International Forum (1995).

Paola Bacchetta is an Associate Professor of Sociology based in the Department of Geography and Women's Studies at the University of Kentucky at Lexington. Bacchetta earned her Ph.D. in Sociology at the Sorbonne (Paris). She is the author of a book on Hindu nationalism entitled The RSS and the Nation: Gendered Discourse/Gendered Action (New Delhi: Kali for Women, forthcoming). She is the coeditor of Right Wing Women across the Globe (Routledge, forthcoming in 2001), which is a comparative, interdisciplinary volume that covers all regions of the world. She has been an activist in women's and lesbian networks and in antiracist movements in France, India, Italy, and the United States.

Kathleen M. Blee is Professor of Sociology and Director of Women's Studies at the University of Pittsburgh. She is the author of Women of the Klan: Racism and Gender in the 1920s (University of California Press, 1991) and Inside Organized Racism: Women and Men in the Hate Movement (University of California Press, 2001). She is the editor of No Middle Ground: Radical Women and Protest (New York University Press, 1998), and coauthor, with Dwight Billings, of The Road to andrea breen is a Tasmanian producer, composer, and designer of feminist sound installations whose activism has centered on the performance of feminist plays at national folk festivals, music festivals, and national radio broadcasts. As a producer of the CD Improvisation-image-voice (1998), breen has worked collectively with feminist and lesbian poets to counter racism and sexism in Australian public culture. breen completed an interdisciplinary feminist Ph.D. at the University of Tasmania, where she taught English studies, and has completed a Graduate degree in Creative Arts Therapies from the Melbourne Institute of Experimental and Creative Arts Therapies. She lives in Hobart with her two adult children.

Poverty: The Making of Wealth and Hardship in Appalachia (Cambridge University Press, 2000).

Siobhan Brooks is pursuing a graduate degree in Sociology at the New School for Social Research in New York City. Her writings have been published in Z Magazine, Third Force magazine, HUES magazine, the anthology Whores and Other Feminists, and University of California, Berkeley's Hasting Law Journal. Between 1994 and 1999 she worked as a union organizer at the Lusty Lady exotic dance theater in San Francisco. She has lectured on race, sex work, and feminism at San Francisco State University, University of California, Berkeley, and Yale Divinity School.

Ashwini Deshpande is assistant professor of Economics at the Delhi School of Economics, India. This paper was written when she was a postdoctoral fellow at the Carolina Population Center, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, USA. Her publications have examined the international debt crisis of the 1970s and intergroup inequality in India with special emphasis on caste and gender. She teaches courses on the economics of discrimination, the history of international labor flows, and the international debt crisis. Email: ashwini@cdedse.ernet.in and ashwini6@hotmail.com.

Jane Freedman is Lecturer in the Department of Politics at the University of Southampton, United Kingdom. She earned her doctorate in political sociology from the University of Paris VII. Her research centers on issues of gender and politics in France and Europe. Her publications include Femmes Politiques: Mythes et Symboles (Paris: L'Harmattan, 1997) and Women, Immigration and Identities in France (Oxford: Berg, 2000). She has also published articles and chapters on issues of gender parity in French and European politics, and on gender and migration in France and Europe.

Veronica Magar is Regional Technical Advisor, Asia for CARE. She is responsible for designing, implementing, monitoring, and evaluating community-based reproductive health programs (including HIV/AIDS). She earned her doctoral degree in public health from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 2000. Her dissertation was titled Reconceptualizing Domestic Violence in Delhi Slums: Multidimensional Factors and Empowerment Approaches. Since the early 1980s, she has been involved with activism in international women's health and development and through labor organizing of nurses in the United States. Her social concerns emerged from her multicultural experiences which range from growing up Egyptian/German in America to working in low-income communities in Brazil, Egypt, India, and the United States. She can be reached at magar@care.org.

Minelle Mahtani is a Killam Postdoctoral Fellow at the University of British Columbia in the departments of Geography and Journalism, where she is exploring issues of identity among "mixed race" youth in Vancouver. She earned her degree in geography from University College, London. Between 1994 and 1999 she worked as a national television news producer for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Toronto.

Heather Merrill is assistant professor of geography at Dickinson College. She earned her degree in 1999 from the University of California at Berkeley. She is a critical feminist geographer working on race, subalternity, and interethnic feminist politics. She is currently working on a manuscript entitled Speaking Subjects: Remaking Feminisms and Race in the New Migrant Europe.

Yoshiko Nozaki is Lecturer in the Department of Educational Leadership and Social Policy Studies at Massey University in New Zealand. Nozaki earned her Ph.D. in Educational Policy Studies at the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 2000. She earned her B.A. in Japanese history at Nagoya University and has taught in Australia, Japan, and the United States. Her recent articles have been published in Anthropology and Education Quarterly and Urban Education. Between 1979 and 1989 she taught geography and history to junior high school students in the Kasugai and the Nagoya public school systems in Japan.

Eileen O'Brien is Assistant Professor of Sociology at State University of New York at Brockport, where she teaches courses that contribute to the Women's Studies, African and African American Studies programs. She earned her M.A. in Sociology at Ohio State University and her Ph.D. in Sociology in 1999 at the University of Florida. She has written articles on white antiracist activists, as well as the issue of reparations for African Americans (with Joe Feagin) in When Sorry Isn't Enough. Her current research critically evaluates diversity training programs in the United States.

Michelle Rosenthal earned her Ph.D. in Anthropology from the University of California at Santa Cruz. She has studied at Yale University and the University of Sussex, England. Between 1994 and 1996 she conducted field research at a rape crisis center in Cape Town, South Africa.

Ellen Kaye Scott is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at Kent State University in Ohio. She earned her Ph.D. at the University of California, Davis, and her M.A. in political science from the New School for Social Research in New York. She is the author of the forthcoming book Feminists Working across Racial Divides and the codirector of a longitudinal ethnographic study on the impact of welfare reform on the lives of welfare recipients in Cleveland, Ohio. Scott's research is directly related to her engagement in battered women's movements and anti-poverty initiatives in the United States.

Carolyn Martin Shaw is Professor of Anthropology and former Provost of Kresge College at the University of California at Santa Cruz. She is the author of Colonial Inscriptions: Race, Class and Sex in Kenya (University of Minnesota Press, 1995) which is based upon years of work in Kenya, as well as numerous articles. She first went to Zimbabwe in 1982. In 2000 she was declared an Honorary Trustee of the Women's Action Group, which she helped to found in 1983. She has been on the editorial board of feminist, anthropological, and gay/lesbian journals.

Sohera Syeda was born in Hyderabad, India, and raised in the United States. She earned her B.A. in Molecular Biology, Biochemistry, and Women's Studies at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut. She lives and works in Chicago, Illinois.

Becky Thompson teaches Sociology and African American Studies at Simmons College in Boston. She is the coeditor of two volumes and the author of A Promise and a Way of Life: White Antiracist Activism (University of Minnesota Press, forthcoming), Mothering without a Compass: White Mother's Love, Black Son's Courage (University of Minnesota Press, 2000), and A Hunger So Wide and So Deep: A Multiracial View of Women's Eating Problems (University of Minnesota, 1994). She is a member of Academics for Mumia Abu-Jamal.

France Winddance Twine, an enrolled member of the Creek Nation of Oklahoma, is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of California, Santa Barbara, where she teaches feminist theory, critical race theory, antiracist studies, and field research methods. Twine is the author of Racism in a Racial Democracy: The Maintenance of White Supremacy in Brazil (1997) and Bearing Blackness in Britain (forthcoming). She is the coproducer of the documentary Just Black? Multiracial Identity (1991), and the coeditor of three volumes including Racing Research, Researching Race: Methodological Dilemmas in Critical Race Studies (New York University Press, 2000), and Ideologies and Technologies of Motherhood: Race, Class Sexuality and Nationalism (Routledge, 2000). Her recent articles have appeared in Race & Class, Social Identities, Feminist Studies, and Meridians: feminism, race, transnationalism. She is a member of the editorial collective that publishes Feminist Studies and a consulting editor for American Sociological Review.

Delores M. Walters earned her Ph.D. in Anthropology from New York University and her B.S. in Nursing from Columbia University. She is the Director of the ALANA (African, Latin, Asian, Native American) Cultural Center at Colgate University in Hamilton, New York. As an educator and administrator, she provides support for students of color while overseeing multicultural programs and activities that are inclusive of all students. She also teaches an anthropology course in which students are helping the medical staff in a nearby community to become more culturally sensitive to their diverse immigrant and refugee clientele. As a community organizer, she has coordinated various social, health, housing and educational self-help programs. Her doctoral research on African-identified Yemeni groups led to a documentary video entitled "Murshidat: Female Primary Health Care Workers Transforming Society in Yemen" (1999).

Feminism and Antiracism

