I am who I am today because of...

my mother, thank you for the (tough and gentle) love and for the countless sacrifices.

Emiliano & Aurelia. You are the center of my world, thank you for making me the center of yours. Mucho y Siempe.

Eric. You have pushed me to grow in ways I could have never imagined. Thank you for serving as a sounding board, first and last reader, editor, and, most importantly, frequent destroyer of doubt.

los 'Hernandez', especialmente Hilaritza, Candybelle, Anabelle, Melvin, Diogenes, Hector, Maria Elizabeth, mis tias Deisy y Altagracia, mis tios Melido, Jose, y Armando, gracias por las bolas a la universidad, las firmas en los prestamos de estudios, por el apoyo, aliento, entendimiento y amor. ¡Hoy se bebe!

the Cioes who have showed me the magic of intergenerational love and the importance of lazy days on the beach.

the many great teachers I have had throughout my years as a student at PS. 169, JHS 138 – Dewey in NYC, Brooklyn School for Global Studies, SUNY-Cortland, Long Island University – Brooklyn and, finally, at the CUNY-Graduate Center. Thank you for every word assigned and every bit of feedback offered. Above all, thank you for not only quenching my thirst for information but for encouraging it.

every person who worked at or with PS 24K from 2007-2013; special shout out to the fifth grade and third grade planning teams of 2007-2013, Thank you for holding space for me, for sharing your wisdom and for cheering me on even after I left.

Steve Shreefter, a dear friend and mentor. Steve, you showed me that a pedagogical identity that is centered on truth, inquiry and social justice is not only possible but necessary. Thank you. While you did not live to see me on this journey, I have carried your memory with me every step of the way.

Cecelia Traugh, Ofelia García, David Connor, Celia Oyler, Maite Sánchez, Katia Goldfarb and Jaime Grinberg, to name a few. There are no words to thank you for your time, advice, support, generosity, kindness, and, and.... I dedicate my teaching career to carving out paths for those to come, in the same way you did for me.

my students and their families, the mothers in this book and their families. Thank you for trusting me, for letting me into your homes, and for sharing such precious parts of your life. I am forever humbled.

The Institute for Descriptive Inquiry (IDI) and IDI friends whom I only get to see for a week or two every summer but who bring such riches to my life as a teacher, a parent and a human being. I am eternally grateful for all of the reading, writing and questioning that we've shared.

my GC communities and friends, especially cohort 13, CUNY-NYSIEB, Alisa, Emily and Tom, we could've just been classmates or coworkers but our shared commitment to radical possibilities in and out of schools has made us family. Thank you for showing me what a healthy and supportive community can look like in the academy.

my colleagues at MSU, especially in Educational Foundations, thank you for welcoming me with open arms and for making me feel a part of the group from day one.

A sincere and heartfelt thank you to Home Room and the village of scholarly women who supported me each step of the way as friends, writing partners, readers, therapists, accountability buddies and mock audiences. I had never known the wonder of (intellectual) sisterhood until I met you.

Kelly, Christian, Abby, Adrielle, Kate, Heather, Aletha, Rebecca and Liz, ... [insert funny GIF].

Toni Morrison, Kate DiCamillo (author of The Tale of Despereaux), and Kevin Boyle (author of Arc of Justice), none of whom I've ever met but whose writing drew me in, provided safe haven and nurtured me in ways that traditional fictional writing can never compare.

of the immigrant women, many of them mothers, who make my life as a scholar possible by caring for my children and my home. Thank you.

those who came before me. Thank you for opening doors, windows and, in many cases, for making cracks in the ceiling.
