

Contributors

Raoul V. Bianchi is Principal Lecturer in International Tourism at the University of East London. His primary research interest lies in the international political economy of tourism and the politics of tourism and citizenship. He has also conducted research on tourism development and social change, sustainable tourism, cultural heritage and world heritage, principally in the Canary Islands and various Mediterranean states and regions.

Dianne Dredge is Professor in the Department of Culture and Global Studies, Aalborg University and is based at Copenhagen, Denmark. She is an urban and environmental planner with 20 years experience in tourism and environmental planning in Australia, Mexico and China. Her research interests include tourism planning, policy and governance, community capacity building and tourism education. She is currently Chair of the Tourism Education Futures Initiative (TEFI), a global network of tourism educators.

Stefan Gössling is a Professor at the School of Business and Economics at Linnaeus University, Kalmar, and the Department of Service Management, Lund University, both Sweden. He is also the research coordinator of the Research Centre for Sustainable Tourism at the Western Norway Research Institute. Stefan has worked with sustainable tourism since 1992, focusing primarily on climate change, transport, mobilities and resource use.

C. Michael Hall is a Professor at the University of Canterbury, New Zealand, and Docent in the Department of Geography, University of Oulu, Finland. He is also a visiting professor at the Linnaeus University School of Business and Economics, Kalmar, Sweden and a senior research fellow, School of Tourism and Hospitality, University of Johannesburg, South Africa. Co-editor of Current Issues in Tourism, he has published widely in the areas of tourism, regional development, environmental change and gastronomy.

Atsuko Hashimoto is Associate Professor in the Department of Tourism Management at Brock University. Her research focuses on socio-cultural, cross-cultural and human aspects of tourism, human rights and equity issues in tourism development and issues in sustainable tourism development in rural areas. She is also a member of the Environmental Sustainability Research Centre at Brock University.

Tazim Jamal is Associate Professor in recreation, park and tourism at Texas A&M University, USA. Her study areas include community-based tourism, heritage tourism and collaborative planning for sustainable destination management. She also works on theoretical, methodological and pedagogic issues related to tourism and sustainability and is the co-editor of The Handbook of Tourism Studies (SAGE, 2009).

Tanja Mihalič is a Professor of Tourism at the Faculty of Economics, University of Ljubljana, Slovenia. As a tourism researcher she has contributed to several international research projects and publications in the field of tourism economics, development and management, especially tourism competitiveness and sustainable tourism. She collaborates with many national and international tourism organisations, and is a member of the United Nations WTO World Committee on Tourism Ethics.

Edward Nkyi is a Graduate Student of the MA (Peace and Conflict) Program and a Teaching Assistant at the University of Manitoba. Edward has research interests in tourism, human rights, international development and political economy. He holds a Master of Arts Degree in Political Science from Brock University and Master of Laws Degree in Human Rights and Criminology from the University of Hull (UK). In addition, he has a Bachelors Degree in Political Science from the University of Ghana.

Daniel Scott is a Canada Research Chair in Global Change and Tourism and the Director of the Interdisciplinary Centre on Climate Change at the University of Waterloo (Canada). He has worked extensively in the area of climate change and tourism, including collaborations with the United Nations World Tourism Organisation, United Nations Environment Programme and the World Meteorological Organisation. Dr Scott has been a contributing author and expert reviewer for the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change Third, Fourth and Fifth Assessment Reports and is currently also on the Advisory Committee to the Global Partnership for Sustainable Tourism.

Regina Scheyvens is Professor of Development Studies at Massey University. Here she combines a passion for teaching about international development with research on tourism and development. Two books have emerged from this research, Tourism for Development: Empowering Communities (Pearson, 2002), and Tourism and Poverty (Routledge, 2011), along with articles on themes such as backpacker tourism, ecotourism and sustainable tourism. She has conducted research in a number of countries in southern Africa, the Pacific Islands and Southeast Asia, most recently examining corporate social responsibility in the hotel sector in Fiji.

Richard Sharpley is Professor of Tourism and Development at the University of Central Lancashire, Preston, UK. He has previously held positions at a number of other institutions, including the University of Northumbria (Reader in Tourism) and the University of Lincoln, where he was professor of Tourism and Head of Department, Tourism and Recreation Management. His principal research interests are within the fields of tourism and development, island tourism, rural tourism and the sociology of tourism, and his books include Tourism and Development in the Developing World (2008, with David Telfer), Tourism, Tourists and Society, 4th Edition (2008) and Tourism, Development and Environment: Beyond Sustainability (2009), The Darker Side of Travel: The Theory and Practice of Dark Tourism (2009, with Philip Stone), and Tourist Experience: Contemporary Perspectives (2011, with Philip Stone). A second edited collection on tourist experiences, The Contemporary Tourist Experience: Concepts & Consequences, was published in 2012.

Chris Southgate was formerly a lecturer in environmental management at the University of Central Lancashire, UK, and is now Dean of the College of Sustainability Sciences and Humanities, Zayed University, Abu Dhabi, UAE. He completed his doctoral thesis at the University of Manchester in 1998 on natural resource management and institutional change in Kenya's Maasailand.

David J. Telfer is Associate Professor in the Department of Tourism Management at Brock University. His principal research areas include the relationship between tourism and development theories, economic linkages between tourism and host communities, tourism planning and rural tourism. He is co-author of Tourism and Development in the Developing World (2008, with Richard Sharpley) and is also a member of the Environmental Sustainability Research Centre at Brock University.

Dallen J. Timothy is Professor of Community Resources and Development and Senior Sustainability Scientist at Arizona State University. He is also Visiting Professor at Universiti Teknologi Mara (Malaysia), Visiting Adjunct Professor at Indiana University, and visiting instructor in the Erasmus Mundus European Master's Program at the University of Girona, Spain. He serves on the editorial boards of 13 international journals and is the editor-in-chief of the Journal of Heritage Tourism. His primary tourism research topics include geopolitics and international borders, cultural heritage, religious pilgrimage, identity and nationalism, immigration and diasporas, and cultural adaptation. He has published many articles and books on these and other topics, and currently has ongoing research projects in Asia, North America, the Middle East, the Caribbean and Europe.