

Acknowledgements

We are very grateful to the contributors of this volume for their support and cooperation and particularly for their chapters. The relationships between tourism and religion are complex, sensitive and often personal, and the authors have responded to our requests for contributions on specific topics in true academic spirit. We are also appreciative of their patience and positive responses to queries over the preparation of the volume. We trust that our editorial adjustments have not distorted the meanings of their texts and have not exceeded our responsibilities. Errors and omissions remain our responsibility.

We also wish to thank the staff at Channel View Publications, particularly Elinor and Sarah, for their support for and patience with the project, from the initial proposal to the final submission of the completed manuscript. They have been an excellent group of colleagues with whom to work.

Finally, we thank our families for their patience and support during what became a rather longer than anticipated project; their tolerance and encouragement are much appreciated.
