

Contents

Preface	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
1 Language Learning in Immersion Programs	1
Language Learning in Australia: Setting the Context	1
Aims of this Study	3
Existing Research on Immersion Programs	8
Australian Immersion Research	15
2 How and Where the Research Was Done	20
The Research Approach	20
The Settings and the Students	20
The French Immersion Setting	22
The Chinese Immersion Setting	27
3 Learners' Responses to the Learning Context	34
Sources of Information	34
Scripts for School	39
The Role of the Teacher	45
Response to the Curriculum	55
The Role of Fellow Students	58
Discussion and Conclusions	67
4 Language Learning Experiences	74
Introduction	74
Making Sense of the Classroom	75
Not Making Sense	79
Producing the Second Language	82
Summary and Discussion	97

5	Reading and Writing	.102
	Introduction	.102
	What Do We Know Already About Reading and Writing in Chinese?	.103
	How the Data Were Collected	.105
	Reading in Chinese	.108
	Writing in Chinese	.111
	Reading in French	.113
	Writing in French	.115
	Discussion and Conclusions	.116
6	Language Learning Processes and Strategies	.119
	Introduction	.119
	The Learners of Chinese	.123
	Jane: Pictures, sounds and stories	.125
	Tamara: Living in a comfortable world	.128
	Patrick: Seeking for perfection	.130
	Norman: Building blocks and blackouts	.132
	The Learners of French	.134
	Peter: Using a second language to learn a third	.136
	John: Getting by with help	.137
	Helena: Wonderful words	.138
	Melissa: Aiming high	.139
	Summary and Conclusions	.141
7	Discussion and Conclusions	.144
	Discussion	.144
	Future Directions	.149
	Appendix A: Transcription Conventions	.151
	Appendix B: Translation of Classroom Activity Sheet	.151
	References	.152
	Index	.161