

Contents

Foreword by Nancy Hornberger vii

Acknowledgements ix

Preface xi

1 Language Revitalization. 1

 Basic terms and definitions 3

 Language revitalization as a field of study 5

 Language shift. 12

 Language planning 21

 Ethnography of communication. 27

 Organization of book 31

2 Setting the Scene 33

 The Ecuadorian context 34

 Saraguro and Saraguros 45

 Research methods. 57

 Conclusion 68

3 Language Use and Ethnic Identity in Lagunas 70

 Language shift in Lagunas 71

 Language use in the home 82

 Marked language use in the community 88

 ‘Authentic Quichua’ and Unified Quichua. 93

 Language and ethnicity in Lagunas. 97

 Conclusion 106

4 Language Use and Ethnic Identity in Tambopamba 108

 Language competencies and language shift 109

 Language use in the home and community. 116

 Language attitudes and conceptions of ethnic identity 123

 Conclusion 137

5	Quichua Instruction and the Community Schools.	139
	School organization, philosophy, and history	142
	Quichua instruction	158
	Student and teacher use of Quichua	169
	Student knowledge and learning of Quichua.	176
	Conclusion	180
6	Prospects and Processes Revisited.	185
	Language revitalization prospects	185
	Language revitalization processes	189
	Language obsolescence and language revitalization	196
	Language planning and language revitalization	199
	Language revitalization and second language acquisition	214
	Suggestions for language revitalization in Saraguro and beyond	218
	Conclusion	229
	Appendices.	232
	Appendix 1: Monthly schedule of research activities	232
	Appendix 2: Log of audio-taped interviews	233
	Appendix 3: Interview guides	235
	References	240
	Indices	254