A multiyear project such as this would not have been possible without a great deal of support, encouragement, and caffeine. First and foremost, I am deeply indebted to the Inter-American Magnet School community. “Ms. Torres” and “Ms. Maas” in particular, as well as numerous other teachers, parents, administrators (notably Maria Cabrera), and students, gave generously of their time, experience, and knowledge. They were rightly very proud of the school they created, and I thank them for inviting me to learn about it.

Special thanks to “Carolina,” “Melissa,” “Matt,” and “Otto,” the four focal students, and their parents, for agreeing to be part of this study. I have very fond memories of our interactions, from your first days of fifth grade up through your eighth-grade graduation. It was a pleasure to work with such great kids.

Anna Maria Escobar and Shelley Roberts mentored me as I designed and carried out the first year of this study. Their complimentary approaches – Anna Maria as the consummate variationist, Shelley as the ethnographer extraordinaire – pushed me to develop muscle in both areas. Erica McClure, Georgia “Joey” Garcia, and Giuli Dussias also provided valuable feedback during the early stages of this project. Tara Fortune was an inspirational dissertation buddy.

Several colleagues read later versions of this research, including Carol Klee, Dee Tedick, Donna Christian, and Ofelia Garcia. The Series Editors at Multilingual Matters, Nancy Hornberger and Colin Baker, provided excellent suggestions for the final manuscript. Rebecca Freeman Field also gave a close, insightful reading. Tommi and Marjukka Grover kept everything on schedule. My heartfelt thanks to all of you.

People who assisted me with data entry and analysis include Renata Garcia, Janine Matts, Silvina Montrul, and the talented and patient statisticians Stacie Hudgens and Kevin Li. Un montón de gracias también a Alejandra Brito.

My move to Chicago would not have been possible without the offer of a teaching position by Lucía Elías-Olivares, who in 1999 was the Interim Head of the Department of Spanish, French, Italian & Portuguese at the University of Illinois at Chicago. A fellowship from the Diffenbaugh Foundation also supported data collection during 1999–2000.

Other Chicago institutions, especially Wicker Park's Filter Café and Bucktown's Café de Lucca, kept me going with coffee, a laptop connection, and a blissfully noisy, anonymous writing environment.

Finally, my husband, Cliff Meece, and my in-laws, Gayle and Tom Meece, have been unconditionally supportive of my work, for which I love and thank them. I hope that my sons, Nicolás and Samuel, will be lucky enough to attend a school as wonderful as the Inter-American that I came to know.
