

CONTENTS

Preface ix

Acknowledgments xxi

1 Time Has Changed 3

The Uneasy Relationship with the Past in the Postwar Period 3

A Fatherless Generation: Pietro Germi's Gioventù perduta 15

A Hero Astray: Vasco Pratolini's Un eroe del nostro tempo 22

The Suicide of the Future: Rossellini's Germania anno zero 30

2 From Mother to Daughter 39

The Emergence of a Female Genealogy 39

The War as Emotional Setting: Anna Banti's Artemisia 42

Female Solidarity: Alba de Céspedes's Dalla parte di lei 49

Cinema Rediscovered Women 58

'La' Magnani, or about Motherhood and Visconti's Bellissima 66

3 The Myth of America 79

The Antecedent 79

Revisionism at Work: Cesare Pavese and Giuseppe De Santis 86

The Rossellini-Bergman Affair: Stromboli terra di Dio 96

The Lost Train of Cultural Blending: De Sica's Stazione Termini 101

The Myth Is Over: Pavese's La luna e i falò 109

viii Contents

4 The Country at Hand	117
The Journey	117
The South: Ernesto De Martino and Rocco Scotellaro	121
Naples: Ortese's Il mare non bagna Napoli and Rossellini's Viaggio in Italia	127
Toward a Postmodernist Paradigm: Antonioni's Le amiche	141
 Conclusions	 149
 Notes	 157
 Bibliography	 215
 Index	 231