

Acknowledgments

---

I would like to thank: my colleagues in the Department of Spanish and Portuguese at the University of California, Davis, and in the University of California Comparative Iberian Studies Working Group; the University of Toronto Press, particularly Siobhan McMenemy and Mark Thompson, for support of this project; Onésimo T. Almeida; Silvia Bermúdez; Leopoldo M. Bernucci; Sérgio Campos Matos; Thomas Harrington, Francisca González-Arias, Carmen Pereira-Muro, and Sharon Roseman, for helping me to formulate the ideas presented in chapter 3; and my external reviewers, for substantive and helpful feedback.

An earlier, abbreviated version of chapter 2 was published as “Antero de Quental, Iberista: Iberianism as Organizing Principle and Evolving Intellectual Commitment,” (Iberoamericana, Nueva época, 8, no. 1 [September 2008]: 45–60). Chapter 4 builds from the articles “Portugal na visão unamuniana da Ibéria como unidade dialética” (Estudos Avançados, 24 [69] [2010]: 61–78), “Iberian Anguish: Unamuno’s Influence on Miguel Torga” (Luso-Brazilian Review 49, no. 2 [2012]: 188–206), and “A Poetry of Flesh and Bone: Miguel de Unamuno and Miguel Torga” (Portuguese Studies 30, no. 1 (2014): 21–36), though its focus and argument are broader. All translations from the Portuguese, Spanish, Catalan, and Galician are mine except where otherwise noted. I take full responsibility for errors of fact, translation, or transcription.

This page intentionally left blank

IBERIANISM AND CRISIS

Spain and Portugal at the Turn of the Twentieth Century

This page intentionally left blank