Resisting Invisibility won the 2017 Premio de Monografía Crítica Victoria Urbano, an international prize awarded by the Asociación de Estudios de Género y Sexualidades (AEGS). I want to thank AEGS for their support of this project. An earlier version of a section of chapter 4 was published as “The Detective Turned Victim: The Victimization and the Visibility of the Female Body in Maria-Antònia Oliver’s Lònia Guiu Series” in Àmbitos Feministas, vol. 6, 2016, pp. 79–91. Also, an abbreviated version of chapter 5’s section on Isabel Franc’s Emma García series first appeared as “Resisting Invisibility: Lesbianizing the Public Space in Isabel Franc’s Emma García Stories” in Hispanic Review, vol. 85, no. 1, Winter 2017, pp. 47–67. Lastly, a few paragraphs from the introduction and from chapter 4 were included in “Revenge by Castration: Breaking the Narrative Thread of Rape in Maria-Antònia Oliver’s Fiction” in Studies in 20th & 21st Century Literature, vol. 41, no. 1, Spring 2017, Article 17. I would like to thank Carmen Urioste, Linda Grabner, and Necia Chronister for their editorial guidance. I remain indebted to Mario Santana and Agnes Lugo-Ortiz for their support throughout the course of the research and writing of this book and for their continued mentorship. A very special thank you goes to Kathleen McNerney and to Nick Phillips for their feedback on the manuscript and to Melissa Stewart for her advice during the earlier stages of the process.

Thanks also go to my UC Davis colleagues, especially Robert Newcomb for his comments on the manuscript, as well as John Slater and Michael Subialka for their encouragement and advice throughout this process. I am grateful to my former research assistant, Alba Marcé García, and my current research assistant, Morgan Smith, both of whose editorial and translation help proved most useful during the later stages of the project, and to the graduate students at UC Davis who participated in my seminar on female crime fiction for our insightful discussions. I would also like to thank the University of Toronto Press, particularly Mark Thompson and Janice Evans, for supporting this project, and my external readers for their comments and recommendations.

Finally, I am most grateful to my family, especially Brian, Yolanda, Pedro Antonio, Juan Pablo, Pedro José and Nancy, Ken, Arlene, and my grandmother, Ana, and my friends, in particular Gretchen and Russell, who have offered their unconditional love and support as I completed this study.
