

Contents

List of Illustrations vii

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: Coming to Life at the Intersection of Ultramontanist and Colonialism 3

Part One. Contextualizing the Vision of the Foundress

- 1 Who Were the RNDMs? Arrival in Canada (1898) and Transnational Ethos 13
- 2 Foundational Thoughts on Education and the Interplay of Locality, Congregational Structure, and Church Teachings 34

Part Two. Educational Apostolate in Time and Space: The Schools in Canada

- 3 Manitoba in the Early Years: Building a French-Canadian Identity with the RNDM Foundations 53
- 4 English-Speaking Communities, Immigrants, and the Quest for Social Recognition in Manitoba 83
- 5 The RNDM in Saskatchewan: Residential, Parish, Separate, and Private Schools for Girls 96
- 6 The Dusty Years to the Post-war Years 118
- 7 The Church and the Classroom before Vatican II: Spirituality in the Schools and Recruitment 132
- 8 The 1960s: Changing Context and New Experiences 143

Part Three. The Reception of Vatican II: Epistemic Shifts and Visionary Changes

- 9 The Setting That Framed the Reception of Vatican II 153
10 Resignifying Vision and Mission: The 1990s and 2000s, and the Movement towards Eco-Spirituality 190

Part Four. The Province Engages in a Foreign Mission

- 11 The Mission in Peru 205
Conclusion: Coming Full Circle 239

Appendix A. Making Sense of Memories: Conversation among Former Provincials – A Literal Transcription 247

Appendix B. Religieuses de Notre Dame des Missions (RNDM) Sisters' Houses in Canada 305

Notes 315

Index 361