

Contents

List of Illustrations ix

Acknowledgments xi

Introduction: From behind the Lines to Writing War's Texts:
Redrawing the Boundaries of War and Gender 3

- 1 Love of Nation and Women's Citizenship in Rosario de Acuña's
Amor a la patria (1877) 19
- 2 Gender, Casticismo, and Imperial Nations in Spain's fin de siècle:
Blanca de los Ríos's Sangre española (1899) 38
- 3 Charity, Patria, and Painting War's Pain: Concepción Arenal's Writings, 1869–79 57
- 4 The Monstrosity of War and Justpeace: Concepción Arenal's *Cuadros
de la guerra* and Ensayo sobre el Derecho de Gentes 77
- 5 Getting Intimate with Empire: Fin-de-siècle Women Writing a Psychology of the Disaster 96
- 6 Disordering the Imperial Home: Blanca de los Ríos's La niña de Sanabria (1907) 117
- 7 Purity of Blood in the National Family? Spain's War in Morocco in Carmen de Burgos's En la guerra (Episodios de Melilla) (1909) 135
- 8 Between Feminist Aspirations and Pacifist Ideals: Burgos's Essays on World War I and Women in War 156

viii Contents

9 Denouncing War's Broken Syntax: Burgos's World War I
Novellas 173

Conclusion: Transforming Moral Maps, Then and Now 195

Notes 205

References 233

Index 269