Unknowingly, the seeds for this book were planted years ago. Our colliding and mutually enlivening research on cultural representations of forced migration, gender-based oppression, and other forms of systemic subjugation – including nationalism and ableism – organically brought forth our sustained inquiry into refuge in the context of ecological crisis. The partnership that developed has been among the most fruitful undertakings of our careers and for that we are grateful, to each other and to those without whom this publication would not have been possible. We hope that those who read Beyond Human – whose focus on Spanish cultural production through the ages aims to fill a gap in the environmental humanities – will find it to be a worthwhile and engaging tome for its unique probing of ecocritical concerns, responses, and innovative proposals. This collection is the culmination of the efforts of many, whose steadfast commitment to us and to our project are a challenge to summarize.

First and foremost, we thank our fellow Hispanists and feminists, especially Nina L. Molinaro, Debra Faszler-McMahon, Victoria L. Ketz, Dawn Smith-Sherwood, Carmen Flys Junquera, and Luis (Iñaki) Prádanos, who have championed our work through a multitude of conferences (EASLCE, KFLC, MACHL, NeMLA) and have bolstered our critical voices through the publication of important monographs in our field. It has been an honour to learn from you. We are likewise very grateful to the contributors of this volume for their adhesion to this project; their willingness to continually explore, discuss, draft, and revise speaks not only to their generosity, but also to their belief in the power of collaboration and critique to inspire change. Thank you for entrusting us with your outstanding essays.

We would like to recognize Assumption University (the D'Amour College of Liberal Arts and Sciences) and York University (the Faculty of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies and Glendon College) for their funding through faculty development grants, research leaves and course releases, conference stipends, and publication support. We extend our appreciation to colleagues at our respective institutions who have provided incalculable guidance to our careers as faculty and researchers, including those in Assumption's Department of Modern and Classical Languages and Cultures, and Vivienne Anthony at the Emmanuel d'Alzon Library, as well as those who have counselled us as women in academia, namely Dona Kercher, Ellen Anderson, Michol Hoffman, Maria João Maciel Jorge, Susan Ehrlich, and Sheila Embleton. We are thankful as well to our editor at the University of Toronto Press, Mark Thompson, for his interest in this project for Toronto Iberic, his patience, and his gracious stewardship.

Special thanks must also be extended to our earliest supporters and mentors at the universities where we completed our graduate studies. At the University of Kansas, we acknowledge Robert C. Spires, in memoriam (1936–2013), for the foundation in Spanish literary studies and for cultivating a special bond among his students, who aim to carry on his exemplary professional ethics and dedication to the field, and we recognize the KU graduate program in Spanish community, whose camaraderie and care for one another throughout the years is unparalleled. From the University of Toronto, we are indebted to the wisdom imparted and opportunities granted by Stephen Rupp; the synergy and cariño extended by Berenice Villagómez, Rita M. Palacios, and Sean Hutchman; and particularly to Robert A. Davidson for modelling courage, forgiveness, and a contagious enthusiasm for envisioning new paths and motivating others to do the same.

We must express our gratitude to our families. To Antonio, for your unabating flexibility, dependable encouragement, and steady partnership, I (Maryanne) am immensely grateful. Thank you, Santi; your sense of humour grounds me and your adventure seeking encourages me to imagine new possibilities. To Daniel C. and Maryanne V. Leone, you inspire me in your unwavering dedication to your family, communities, and careers. I am grateful to José, for your creative, critical spirit, and to Marisol, always in my heart, for your lifelong enjoyment of literature and writing, as well as to both for our Spanish home. Appreciation is also felt for Luna and Hayley, for their companionship, playfulness, and insistence that I take a break. And, to my sisters Stephanie and Susan, my extended family, and my nurturing friends, on whom I can count, always, thank you.

To Kevin, without whom this endeavour would have been inconceivable, thank you for your unceasing selflessness, the sincerity of your companionship, and the bounty of your patience. Thank you also to Fiona and Daphne for your curiosity, wit, and reminders to keep it real. To Connie Lino and in loving memory of Manuel Lino, I (Shanna) am grateful for your passion, perseverance, and unconditional confidence in me. And finally, my gratitude goes to Carmen Fernandes, Nando Fernandes, Julie Taylor Fernandes, Soraya Silva, and Betsy Frazer, as well as to Rosanna Granato, Maxine Britto, and Lisa McFarland for, together, forming the netting that has allowed so many worthwhile risks to be taken and dreams to be pursued.
